The Know-Nothing Meeting in Independence-square.

LARGE GATHERING AND SMALL SPEECHES.

Proceedings of the Convention Ratified.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sunday, June 17, 1855.

As your readers had previously been informed, the Pro-Slavery members of the American National Convention resolved to hold a public meeting in Philadelphia, at which they would call for a ratification of their proceedings. The meeting was held in Independence-square, on Saturday night.

During the afternoon of Saturday, occasional showers gave rise to fears that the night would not be favorable to the meeting, and the sequel proved the fears to have been exceedingly well grounded.

At 8 o'clock there were probably about 2,000 persons in the Square, but the speaking did not commence until near 9 o'clock. At its commencement there were assembled between 10,000 and 15,000 persons present. Three stands had been erected, specially intended for speaking on the steps of the Mayor's office.

The stand nearest Independence Hall was first occupied. Just as the Presidential party took their seats the heavens fairly opened, and in fifteen minutes had elapsed, audience, speakers and reporters were drenched to the skin. Under such circumstances it was exceedingly difficult to take notes of the proceedings with any reasonable hope of being able to read them accurately. However, what I have given of the speeches I am confident represents the sentiments of the speakers, if not their exact language.

I never before saw so great a display of banners and transparencies. The TIRE Ward delegation was first on the ground, with the following transparency:

WE GO FOR THE UNION,
THE WHOLE UNION,
AND NOTHING BUT THE UNION.

Then followed

AMERICANS OF THE EIGHTH WARD.

With the sentiment that

SAMUEL IS ALL RIGHT.

Then

SAM IS WIDE AWAKE.

Next was the order

SAM, STAND UP.

The comforting announcement followed that

SAM IS GOING TO STAND UP.

On the same transparency was a blank letter declaration that

SAM HAS STOOD UP.

Then followed a number of others, with such sentiments as "The Bible and the Constitution," "The Common Schools, the safeguard of the Nation," "First sink but Americans on stand," "Our country and our country's good," "American ladies are the true friends of Sam;" and many others of similar import.

The Meeting at the stand nearest Independence Hall was organized by the appointment of the following officers:

President, Hon. JACOB BROOM.

Vice Presidents.

D. ROBERT KING.

On taking the Chair, Mr. BROOM felt constrained to return thanks for the mark of confidence that had been conferred upon him. As it was intended the meeting should listen to distinguished countrymen, on the subject of their liberties, their institutions and their laws, he had not proposed addressing them. But as those gentlemen had not yet arrived, he trusted the meeting would cooperate with him in the protection of the character and dignity of the country. The order, heretofore, he remarked, had been confined chiefly to the cities of New-York and Philadelphia, but on account of foreign aggressions, a feeling had at length been aroused which was spreading to every hamlet in the land. He rejoiced that Philadelphia should stand now where she stood eleven years ago. It had been his gratification to address the people of eleven States on the subject of Americanism, and he generally found that the principles of the Order were not known or understood. The murder of SHNOZLER and REHNSHILLER was news to the people in many States, but when they heard the circumstances, they rallied around the American banner, in defence of American liberties; and he had now the pleasure of informing them that the American organization was now understood, and that all they had to do at present, was to prove themselves worthy of their sires. While even HENRY A. WISE, of Virginia, who had been the most noisy of their enemies—while he could stigmatize them "lousy, filthy, Christless and ignorant"—while such as he could rise to power, our institutions were by no means safe; and, therefore, he held it to be the duty of all to preserve and redeem the character of the American Order in the Union.

The President then introduced GOV. BROWN, of Tennessee.

GOVERNOR BROWN'S SPEECH.

Hon. NEILL S. BROWN, ex-Governor of Tennessee, spoke nearly as follows:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We are met here in Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, and in discharge of the duty assigned me I feel my utter inadequacy for such an occasion; for there is an elegance in your surrounding, and on your banners and transparencies, beyond what my tongue can utter. My friends, what makes this vast concourse? Why have you gathered here on such a night? The answer is—you have met here to discuss the great American movement. And what means this movement? Is it for the gratification of an overstrained ambition to gain an office in the State? No! Neither is it for the formation of a party for the purposes for which parties heretofore have organized. You have had your Whig party and your Democratic party; but they have broken into fragments—and the time has now arrived when the Nation calls upon patriots everywhere to ground their former party arms, and come boldly and effectively upon that platform, every plank of which is a true American principle.

Fellow-citizens, what do we mean by our American platform and our American principles? We mean simply that Americans shall rule America. And why not Americans rule America. We are the descendants of those whose virtue, bravery, and honest effort, made America what it is. [Cries of "We are, we are."] You are here from old Pennsylvania, and do you not love her soil more than any other? [Voices, "Yes, we do."] Are there not associations of your individual localities, which render them dearer to you than any other localities can possibly be? [Cries of "There are," and cheers.] Now, think not the foreigner can view our land and our institutions with feelings such as those which swell your bosoms!—[Cries of "No, no."] He thought, despite his will, will wander back to Ireland or to Germany, and he will not forget that one or the other is his fatherland. I do not wish to reflect upon good foreigners, when I say we have not yet had one native born Democrat AMONG US in our history.

I heard an evening speaker to-day, which gave to Democrats well cut sentiments with foreigners. The circumstance transpired in this same Independence-square. An Irishman went up to a negro and said—"Sam, will you tell me where they give out the voting papers?" The negro replied: "We Americans are not going to gib out any more papers. We has arrive to the conclusion not to gib papers no more to no foreigners who are not born in the Americanness!" [Laughter and cheers.] Now, these foreigners have never done anything for our institutions, and they have no right to claim more than we possess to give them. We offer them a home, and they have that opinion, and what more have they a right to ask of us? Nothing. The intolerant foreigners will sympathize with this movement, because we say to him, We have a place here, but that requires protection. Shall we be trampled upon? Shall our institutions be trampled upon? Shall our Bibles be taken from our schools? Shall our rights be taken from us? Shall we be trampled on or religion to persecute, but where Roman Catholicism predominates? I know there is no liberty. Where is Ireland? and where is Belgium, France, and Italy? Rome, where the echoes of mighty eloquence still reverberate along down the track of time? Rome, whose citizens were once free and powerful, has now a Vatican, and a people who are cutpurses and paupers. But recently the people of Italy signed for a return of their ancient glory and independence, and established a Republic. The Pope, soul-smitten, fled the Vatican. But Roman Catholicism could not permit a restoration of liberty, and the Pope was carried back to Rome, supported by the Catholic bayonets of France. Were Catholicism established here in our free land the same would follow; for when you trust your soul in the keeping of a man, he will not fail to take quite as good care of your politics as your soul, and where is your liberty?

[Here a band of music, at the head of an approaching Ward delegation, rendered it necessary for the speaker to halt a few moments.]

Commencing again, he said:

Fellow-citizens, I am not going to ask you to receive Slavery as a good institution in the abstract; I am simply going to ask you, as it exists in fifteen States, and has come down to the people of those States from their fathers, to leave it where the Constitution leaves it—to let it alone. Agitation on the question of Slavery can be of no possible benefit—cannot be otherwise than injurious and dangerous to the Union. Agitation threatens to alienate the sympathies of a people who are and should continue to be brothers, without promising aught of good. We don't ask that Slavery shall be propagated—we simply ask that it be let alone. Peace, peace, is all we ask and all we want. Ours is no pro-Slavery platform. If anybody tells you it is, tell him he is wrong. All our platform favors is that the subject be let alone.

Now, gentlemen, I have an interest in this Union. It is mine and it is yours. It belongs to all of us. It was founded on Compromise, and it has been sustained by compromise. And, gentlemen, Slavery existed in the States when the Union was formed. I am not going to make a speech in defence of Slavery. It needs no defence. Agitation on this subject has ever been to me forbidden fruit. I never made a Slavery speech, and I am not going to make one now. The subject is discussed only for the sake of agitation, and I eschew it altogether.

[The Sixth Ward now approached the stand with music, transparencies and banners. On one of the banners was a very good likeness of WASHINGTON. On another was a figure called SAM, holding an American flag, with a Bible at the base of the flag-staff. On a transparency was a superb likeness of Brother Jonathan, with a rooster in one hand and a coon in the other—the necks of both grasped firmly. The Sixteenth Ward delegation was an illuminated barrel. Next came the Fifth Ward delegation, with a transparency on which was a striking likeness of SAM on the Car of Liberty. Over his head was written:

SAM'S AROUND TO HOLD THE REINS.

When order had been restored, Mr. BROWN resuming, said:

I merely wish to appeal to you on the subject and ask you whether you are willing to continue this agitation of Slavery or not—for if you are, there is extreme danger to the Union to be apprehended. [Cries of "We are not—let the subject drop," &c.] What, fellow-citizens, has Pennsylvania to gain by a restoration of the Missouri Compromise? Nothing. It would take five years to restore it, even if you were ever so anxious. The House of Representatives may resolve upon its restoration, but the Senate, as at present constituted, would not concur with the House, and the time would be lost. Kansas and Nebraska will be Free States by a law of nature. But, supposing them to ask admission to the Union as Slave States, the Abolitionists say they will not receive them. Now, were Congress to refuse them admission on such ground, it would transcend its legitimate power. Congress has nothing more to be sure of, than that the State asking admission has a Republican form of Government.

Gov. BROWN did not denounce any whole class in the North, as reported in the Sunday Dispatch, but he said that he respected an honest difference of opinion on any subject; and, however wrong it might be, had no harsh terms for such, but only arguments. It was with dishonest agitators North or South—with such as used sectional questions for mere personal aggrandizement—that he had no truce to make. Such men deserved universal reprobation. They merited the curses of the Book of Job, and ought to be baptized in a lake of fire. Such men would not only pull down our temple of liberty, but would raze from their foundations our temples of religion, to gratify a lust for office and place. Such men, whoever they are, and wherever they hail from, and by whatever name they are called, are wicked and reckless, and deserve indiscriminate war at the hands of all honest men. Now, gentlemen, we ask you to love your Union more than agitation upon an abstract subject. [Cries of "We do." "We do."]

Here one of the transparencies caught fire, but was soon extinguished. Mr. BROWN, referring to it, said:

You may scorch Sam, gentlemen, but you cannot consume him. [Great cheering.] Gentlemen, I speak of this agitation, not as a man from Tennessee, but as an American, and ask that it may cease. [Cries of "It shall," "it shall."] What, gentlemen, can you of Pennsylvania gain by its continuance? [Voices—"Nothing."] Nothing, gentlemen, and consequently we appeal to you to come with us and rout these agitators and demagogues. Gentlemen, circumstances for speaking are not propitious, and I shall soon close. [At this time rain was falling very fast.] When I go home, gentlemen, what shall I say of you? [Voices—"Say we've right side up, and all right."] We in Tennessee would like to join hands with Pennsylvania. We are a stone in the great arch of which you are the key. You have here what we all have an interest in—Independence Hall, and its bell and portraits. If you drive us from you, and divide the Union we must have one half of these treasures. [Voices—"We won't stand that."] Then you will have them all. [Voices—"Yes."] Then you must take us with them. [Cries of "Good, good," and "We will."] We are of the same nation with you, and have like desires for its prosperity; so have let us unite—now, beneath the shadows of Independence Hall—that under such a flag we will conquer or perish in the attempt. This American principle, only think of it. Tell it to your wives and to your sweethearts. Tell it to your sisters and brothers, your fathers and your mothers; to those boys, the young guard of the Republic. And tell them you will stand by its flag and have America for Americans.

Mr. BROWN retired amid enthusiastic cheers, notwithstanding the audience must have at this time been thoroughly drenched with rain, which continued falling fast.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. GEORGE G. WEST now came forward and, under cover of an umbrella, read the following resolutions:

Whereas, The American Convention which assembled in this city has adopted upon a platform which is unconstitutional and proscriptive, and which, as such, from the spirit and proclamation characteristic of its deliberations, is calculated to be productive of our complete nationality, and virtually to destroy the confederacy of the States; and whereas it is proper that the sentiments of the American people should be made known on a matter so momentous; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the citizens of the American Union, in accordance with the principles of the Constitution, and in the spirit of the Constitution of the United States, do hereby reiterate our adherence to the principles of the Union, and our determination to support the Constitution of the United States and the laws made in pursuance thereof, notwithstanding any attempt to the contrary, on the part of the Supreme Court of the United States, or any other tribunal, to overthrow the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and the rights of the States, thereunder.

Resolved, That we hereby approve of the platform adopted by the delegates to the American National Convention, and that we will, as far as in our power, give it our unwavering support, because the principles therein contained are in their character just and in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That in the judgment of this meeting the naturalization laws of the United States should be repealed, or else so modified and altered as to require all foreigners a residence of at least twenty-one years before they can be naturalized, and that in no case should any man be naturalized who shall not have resided in the United States for the period of twenty-one years, or who shall not have the intention to obtain a livelihood or acquire property in this country.

Resolved, That we hold that all the offices under the Federal and State Governments should be filled only by native born citizens, and that no person should be eligible to legislate, and to take any place in the administering or executing American laws.

Resolved, That we are opposed to a union of Church and State, and in favor of the largest liberty of opinion upon all religious topics, and that we will forever maintain inviolate the doctrine that all men have a natural and inalienable right to worship their Creator according to the dictates of their own consciences, without having any to molest or make them afraid.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the National Union, and in the language of the illustrious WASHINGTON, cherish it as a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it; and in obedience to his farewell admonition, will "indignantly frown upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enervate the sacred ties which now link together the various parts."

Resolved, That we are ardently attached to the Constitution of the United States, and recognize and regard it as the supreme law—that we will preserve it at all hazards and under all circumstances, believing that no unequivocal mandates ought to be obeyed in that spirit of honesty and sincerity so essential to its effective action as the guardian of the rights of each individual citizen, as well as of the Sovereign States composing the American Union.

After the resolutions had been read and endorsed, there were loud calls for Mr. MALLORY of New-York, who came forward and said he had been present at many gatherings of the people, and had seen but few such audiences as the one before him. He simply wished to ask, is this Sam? I see it is, said he—it speaks from the transparencies and banners that are so numerous here. I know that it is unpleasant to stand here in a drenching rain, but I prefer it to the reign of Catholicism. [Cries of "Good hit," and cheers.] Now, as I see by one of your banners that Sam has thrashed both the old parties, I ask of him as a favor to let America speak to-night. I do not wish to speak kindly of the dead. [Laughter.] I have seen that same old coon before out in the Southern country, when he was large and fat and had no thought of death, but now Sam has him by the nape of his neck, and the death throes are upon him. Then there's that old rooster in Sam's other hand. I have heard that same rooster crow most lustily. He was hatched out in Indiana some fifteen years ago, and as you, Gentlemen recollect, when he crowed, some thought Old Hickory used to crowfoot him. But now Sam's fingers are around his neck, and I think he's a goner. And now, fellow-citizens, I have a word to say to you on a subject of serious import. Some time ago there was an organized movement, at the head of which was Archbishop HUGHES, to banish the Bible from our Common Schools; and I remember there were men in public stations mean enough to pander to the Popish party. But in New-York and Pennsylvania there was found public spirit enough to put down the attempt. The chief in New-York, said to DEWITT, says, to allow Catholics members of their own religion and language. They tried to take from the public fund money for sectarian purposes, to give it to Catholic schools. We, in New-York, triumphed without serious trouble. I regret that you were not so successful here. You were, I recollect, assaulted by the ragamuffins of Europe—by a mob. And in Europe are we indebted for our mobs. But it has gone forth that no Americans have ever been responsible for a mob; that they have come from abroad, and American reputation will not suffer on their account. Had it not been for office-seekers and demagogues, this whole matter would have been settled long ago. It is in consequence of their Anti-American acts that we have been forced, literally forced, to organize here as Americans in support of our institutions and our country.

The Eighteenth Ward delegation, approaching the platform with music, interrupted the speaker for a few moments. As soon as the music ceased, Mr. MALLORY resumed:

In regard to the old parties who have been the cause of all this agitation, I have but little to say. They are dead and our duty is to give them a decent and Christian burial. Put them in rough boxes, and after Bishop HUGHES has delivered their funeral oration, put the boxes upon your drays, and sing—

Rattle his bones
Over the stones,
He's only a pauper
That nobody owns.

In closing I wish to say that the State of New-York endorses the resolutions passed here. And on the platform and principles adopted by the American Order we hope to triumph.

Some one now placed a beeve's tongue, cured, upon the platform. Mr. MALLORY took it up, and declared it to be a fac simile of the tongue of HENRY A. WISE. He said it did not look like a good tongue—it hung out too much; but as HENRY A. WISE had drawn it in, he (the speaker) would draw in the other, without further remark. On the subject of slavery he had very little to say. It existed in thirteen States, and we were not responsible for it. Agitation of the subject at the North he considered wrong. If he were a resident of Tennessee he might be induced to make an Abolition speech, as those at the South were the parties to be affected. We had no Slavery in New-York; neither did it exist in Pennsylvania. What good, then, could come of agitating the question in either State? On this question the American platform expressed the true doctrine—let it alone.

In Europe, they use and rejoice that here we have hissed their criminals and paupers, and they are sending them to us as fast as they can. We ask you to come with us and right this wrong; and I rejoice to see you are coming by scores,

"To execute the Freemen's will,
As lightning doth the will of God."

Col. DOLING, of Virginia, followed Mr. MALLORY. Speaking under such circumstances he considered well nigh vain. It was impossible to speak or hear to advantage in such a storm. It was the first time he had spoken to his brethren of Pennsylvania, and he wished to tell them that, from what he saw, he was satisfied the half had not been told him of their love for the Union and national principles. He talked much of danger to the Union if Slavery was not let alone, and after getting pretty thoroughly soaked, he retired.

MEETING AT THE MAYOR'S OFFICE—SPEECH OF MR. BAYOR.

A large crowd having gathered around the steps of the Mayor's Office, and demanding a speaker, by request of the Chairman, J. W. BAYOR, Esq., of New-York, presented to address them. Mr. BAYOR said:

AMERICANS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS—What means this gorgeous pageant? Is it a dream of the past become a glorious reality of the present? Whence these joyous sounds? Are they the echoes of other and better days revived in living, breathing tones to announce the mighty uprising of a whole people in vindication of their violated rights, in defence of their much abused nationality? Yes! yes! your City, once the theatre of the most important deliberations that ever exercised the human judgment—of events which have had an incalculable influence over the destinies of mankind, has been again the scene of labors scarcely less important to American Freedom, and Republican Liberty! And here, beneath the shadow of "Old Independence Hall," whose sacred memories breathed an inspiration which honest Americans confess has made vocal with patriotism and truth the hearts, are gathered in almost overwhelming numbers, the representatives of those whose wisdom and devotion conferred the gift, to announce the advent of the second great American Revolution—a Revolution of the people, called out at the suggestion of peace to prevent war, to the vindication and reform of their government. This is no mere conspiracy of the politicians to secure place, or to revive other political organizations. I think, God! No! It is a movement originating with the people—proceeding, as has most truly said, not from any one, or any organized party, but from a band—a movement of the people determined to drive out fraud and corruption from the National Councils, resolved to preserve their institutions against the unhallowed influence of foreign intrigue and foreign domination, to defend the liberties they enjoy from every sullen influence—and to preserve to all futurity the rich inheritance—the quiet and glorious AMERICAN UNION! Oh! you, who have understood the value of this Union, and have learned to cherish its safety; the politicians may think, in their despotism, to have shut the strength and importance of the full, the hungry man is satisfied; but the people have taken the reins and intend to hold them—they intend to have their own man, and their own measures; they are not to be diverted by the hypocritical cant of Northern abolition, nor the sophistries of Southern secession. They appreciate not well the blessings they enjoy under the auspices of the Union, to hazard by the agitation that unknown future, dark and threatening, which lies beyond. I have said for the North-ern people, among whom I have lived long enough to know them, that they wage Union men to the heart's core, and this great demonstration of to-night justifies me in saying so before you. They know it was a Union formed on compromise and mutual concession; they received the benefits thereof, and have preserved by them, and they are too true and loyal to deny the rights guaranteed by the same compact to their sister States; and I again declare here to-night, what I recently asserted in Virginia, that, despite all the politicians, pulpit fulmi-nations, and their efforts to sever any tie to the country, the people of the North are not Abolitionists.

Once more, I thank God! gentlemen, that in the bold progress of the American mind, every day is forging new bonds of union between our States and our people. Already has that progress linked the North and the South, the East and the West with its iron wings, over which Commerce—the steam god—chained to the rushing car—marches the monarch of Peace, the Messiah of good will! Already has that progress stitched its sympathetic lines from icy North to sunny South, along whose magic wires our thoughts and wishes travel a thousand leagues quicker than Ariel could put a girdle round the earth—so that the throbbings of kindred hearts, defying time and space, may beat as in unison from Maine to Louisiana! Already has that progress with its touch of enchantment made the wilderness "blossom like a rose," and, in less time than the men of other days would have taken to contemplate an enterprise of ordinary importance, built up cities and empires for the development of American Freedom! And who dares tell me this mighty, this god-like spirit can be curbed at the will of fanatics and traitors! Or, that the American Union, the only temple of American Liberty and rational progress, must fall under their infuriated blows? Never! never! The people have sworn it; they have sworn with a fervor and a solemnity worthy of the occasion, that there shall be forever,

"A union of hands, a union of hearts,
A union of States which none shall sever!"

And while rallying under that proud flag, in whose spanded fold the rainbow's gorgeous heraldry of hope is glow, whose stars that never fall are Freedom's beacon lights, they have sworn too, to stand by

"The flag of our Union forever!"

There were other speakers at the Mayor's office, but none whose speeches were intended for publication.

SPEECHES AT THE CENTRAL STAND.

The meeting in the centre of the square was called to order at 8 o'clock, by Hon. LEWIS C. LEVIN, who introduced Gen. WM. S. PILCHER, of Kentucky. Upon the speaker taking the stand, three cheers were given for "Old Kentucky," and three cheers for "Sam."

General PILCHER commenced his remarks by stating that this was the first opportunity he had ever had of addressing Pennsylvanians. The noise and confusion of the passing delegations and their bands was such as to render it impossible for him to be heard.

He proceeded to give a short account of the proceedings of the Convention, and said that when the platform, which has been published, was passed, there were delegates present from every State and every district in the Union—that there was no discordancy in their opinions—they all knew their rights and dared to assert them, at the same time having a proper respect for the rights of others.

The speaker expressed his surprise at the means of citizens before him who swore first in every direction, and asked if they were all Americans. He was perfectly willing that the Dutch should rule Holland—the Irish Ireland, and England too, if they could do it—the Austrians Austria—the French France—but Americans must and should rule America. This was all that he asked for—that much he would have. He called upon them to hold on to the reins of Government and show how well they could manage the carriage of State. He expressed his entire opposition to the temporal and spiritual power of the Pope, and gave forth as the bill of rights, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of church, and a free expression of opinion.

Colonel BROWN, of Tennessee, was the next speaker. He had been informed that this was the funeral of "Sam." If this was so, "Sam" had more friends than all the members of the old parties put together. He expressed his unqualified opposition to the Pope, and proclaimed that Americans should rule America, from the President down to the lowest office in it. He thought there was not one present, whose liberties had been achieved by their ancestors, but that would cheerfully and cordially respond to these sentiments. He alleged that Tennessee in every nook and corner, and in every district, was enlivened by the presence of that antiquitous individual known as "Sam." Tennessee, said he, locks hands with you. Give with her a long pull and a strong pull, and "Sam" will, undoubtedly, walk into the White House.

Addresses were then delivered by Mr. LITTLEJOHN of North Carolina, Mr. RODY of Mississippi, Col. F. C. FULLER and B. SHIELDS of Philadelphia. While the last three speakers were upon the stand the rain was falling in torrents. At 10 o'clock the meeting adjourned, with nine cheers for "Sam."

PROCEEDINGS AT THE THIRD STAND.

Mr. WILLIAM C. BIDDLE presided at the third stand. Dr. CHALMERS was the first speaker here; he promised New-Jersey for the American cause at the next election.

Col. J. L. MCCALL made a few remarks, and said the South would "go solid" for the platform, and the people of that section expected that New-York and Pennsylvania would go with them.

Mr. A. BOYELLE, of Virginia, compared the American Government to a ship. He was unwilling that foreign or unskilful hands should meddle with the rigging.

Judge STEWART, of Alabama, said "Sam" had now the reins of Government in his own hands.

Mr. WILMER, of Maryland, and others, addressed the meeting at this place, but they were finally compelled to succumb to the drenching rain, and adjourn to the Market House.

THE MEETING AT THE MARKETS.

It was impossible to report with anything like correctness the proceedings at the Markets. The people gathered in squads under the several houses, each with speakers, but the noise of those who were not among the listeners, and the continuous performances of bands of music, rendered hearing distinctly, or, in fact, hearing at all, very uncertain. In the Market-house corner of Market and Sixth streets our reporter was enabled to hear a portion of what Mr. CUNNINGHAM, of South Carolina, remarked.

MR. CUNNINGHAM'S SPEECH.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM, of South Carolina, in substance said:

"South Carolina cordially united in this movement. Broad causes produced, great ideas govern, and noble objects will be consummated in it. Those causes were the evil influences of the old parties in distracting the country by Anti-Slavery agitation, and subjecting it, through factious efforts, to foreign perversions, political and sectarian. The present views contemplated a return to the development of American Republicanism and freedom of conscience, in contradistinction to European purposes, principles and intolerance. The ends to be obtained, were a policy constructed upon what pertained to the American Continent and its civilization, and the execution and enforment of that policy, by Americans "born for the solution."

These ends were obstructed by the dangers to confederacy, springing from Anti-Slavery excitement and distraction. The great middle States found their interest in the preservation of the Union, both as a Government and a common country and market. The South was disposed to agree with and aid in its preservation, upon the condition of the entire cessation of assault upon her institutions, and of interference with their essential or necessary expansion; and on the clearing the way for the objects and mission of Americanism.

The above is, of course, but the substance of Mr. CUNNINGHAM'S remarks. He was followed by Mr. MOREE, of Alabama, who urged the necessity of ceasing agitation on the subject of Slavery, and of uniting upon the platform and principles adopted by the Pro-Slavery remainder of the American Convention. The same may be said of the other speakers at the other market-houses.

Notwithstanding the storm, the meetings in Market-street did not break up until near 1 o'clock on Sunday morning.

So ended the public proceedings of the American National Convention.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

The New Liquor Law in Boston—Arrest of the Notorious Albert J. Tirrell.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 16.

The unconstitutionality of the new Liquor Law was argued in the Supreme Court to-day, before Chief Justice SHAW, in the case of a woman named SULLIVAN, who had been sentenced to the House of Correction for selling liquor, had appealed, and was committed to jail, not being able to give bonds. The Attorney General and District Attorney appeared for the Commonwealth; and after an argument of several hours, the Court postponed a decision till Tuesday next.

ALBERT J. TIRRELL, somewhat notorious in the matter of the murder of MARIA BIDEFORD, was arrested at Portsmouth yesterday for robbing the sailors of the U. S. ship Constitution. It was with some difficulty that the sailors were prevented from lynching him.

Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 16.

DANIEL H. STUART was to-day appointed United States Marshal for the District of Georgia, vice I. R. JOHNSON, resigned.

Shipping—Weather—Crops, &c., &c.

QUEBEC, Saturday, June 16.

Only one hundred and fifty-nine vessels have arrived from sea up to this date, the present year, being two hundred and fifty-four vessels, and ninety-six thousand five hundred and five tons, less than at the same time last year. The decrease in the number of passengers, as compared with last year, is now 24,374.

The appearance of the country is most luxuriant. The weather is fine, and there is every appearance of an abundant harvest. The last news from England has revived the drooping spirits of the business community, who now hope for better times.

Arrest for Murder.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 16.

Upon the arrival of the schooner Oregon at this port, from Jeremie, to-day, GEORGE R. BARTON, Esq., the captain, and WILLIAM BROWN, the mate, were arrested by the United States Marshal, on a charge of murdering the steward of the vessel at Jeremie, in May last. They were both committed to jail for examination on Monday.

Railroad Accident.

PHILADELPHIA, Sunday, June 17.

A locomotive and tender ran off the track and fell down an embankment last evening, on the Camden and Amboy Railroad. The engineer, WILLIAM HAMMOND, was scalded in a dreadful manner.

Arrival of the Southern Mail.

BALTIMORE, Saturday, June 16.

The mail from all points South, as late as due, is at hand. The papers received contain nothing of interest.

Arrival of the Florida at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Saturday, June 16.

The steamship Florida has arrived here, after a passage of 60 hours from New-York.

Hamilton College.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Clarke Prize Exhibition, as announced in the TIMES of last week, took place last evening. Three subjects had been assigned by committee, from which each speaker selected the one he preferred.

The following are the names of the gentlemen who entered as competitors, with their subjects:

The Imagination, as a means of NAPOLEON'S Success. J. E. BURKE, W. B. FAIRFIELD, WM. HART.

The Treatment of Aliens in this country. W. H. JACKSON.

The Risks of Thinking. S. B. STEERE, S. W. STOCKING.

The subjects were well treated, and delivered with much grace and effect. The house was densely crowded. The music by the Quartette Club, under the direction of Mr. FITCH, was very fine and added much to the pleasure of the evening. The decision as to whom the prize is to be awarded will be given Commencement day.

A prize fund of $500, the interest of which is given in two prizes to members of the senior class who excel in theoretical and practical chemistry, has also been recently established at this college, by Hon. GEO. UNDERWOOD of Auburn.

The first examination of competitors for these prizes commenced on Tuesday of last week, and occupied two days. The first prize was awarded to H. B. MILLARD, of New Hartford, and the second to T. AVERY of Clinton.

Are the New-York Know-Nothings Dough-faces?

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The fact that the New-York delegation in the Philadelphia Convention deserted the Free States, is no proof that the American Party in this State is Pro-Slavery. It will be remembered that Mr. BARKER, the President of the National Convention, is also the President of the Hindoo branch of the Order in this State, and that it was under his rule that the Know-Nothings divided here last Fall. The seceders, among other things, were disgusted with the Pro-Slavery discipline of the Order, and those from whom they seceded were enraged at their independence. The original body are the present Hindoos. They are the Pro-Slavery Know-Nothings, and to them is to be attributed the support of the Pro-Slavery Platform by the New-York delegation at the Philadelphia Convention.

Will the Free-Soil Know-Nothings exhibit their will and their power now? or will they let the stigma rest upon them, until they shall have purged it away at the Polls? SAM FREEMAN.

The Know-Nothing Platform.

BRANDRETH HOUSE, NEW-YORK, June 15, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: I notice in your report of the "Platform of the Free States," as adopted yesterday at Philadelphia, you omit my name from the Vermont delegation. I strongly favored the adoption of the Platform, and heartily subscribed it.

As your paper has a large circulation in Vermont, I will thank you to make the correction, that my position may in no wise be misunderstood.

Yours truly, E. M. GUILFORD, Burlington, Vt.

NEW-JERSEY STATE TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.—A Convention of the New-Jersey State Temperance Society was held at New-Brunswick, Thursday, at Grier's Hall. Delegates were present from nearly all the counties in the State. The Convention resolved to raise $5,000 to be placed at the disposal of the State Temperance Committee, to be used in the coming Fall Temperance campaign. At 3½ o'clock the Convention was addressed by Hon. THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN in one of his most powerful speeches. We understand that Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN has consented to write an opinion upon the constitutionality of prohibitory statutes. He was followed by Dr. MARCH, of New-York City.

☞ Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 of Brooklyn, rendered efficient service at the fire in Maiden-lane, New-York, Saturday morning, and succeeded in rescuing one of the bodies from the burning building.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

WEST POINT—Close of the Recitations.

On Friday, the examination of the first or graduating class of Cadets, at the United States Military Academy, West Point, was brought to a close. There was artillery and other firing during the course of the day. One shot, it is said, was thrown over Cozzy's Nest, from the battery below Rox's Hotel.

At 7 in the afternoon, in the presence of the Examiners, the Superintendent, the Professors and other officers of the Academy, and a great many ladies and gentlemen now sojourning at ROOT'S and COZZENS', the Cadets went through their parade. At 8 o'clock they assembled in the Chapel, which was crowded with visitors, where the graduates were presented with their diplomas. The class consisted of thirty-four, and we subjoin their names in the order of merit:

After this, Rev. FRANCIS VINTON, D. D., Rector of Grace Church, Brooklyn, one of the Examiners for the present year, (and who had himself graduated at West Point,) addressed the Cadets as follows:

CADETS OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY—I am here by the appointment of the Board of Visitors, and by the invitation of the Superintendent, in addition to you a few words of affectionate farewell. The Graduating Class have desired me to speak to them on this occasion of their entering upon the duties of manhood. The Board have requested me to address a company of my discovery, so as to include the Class of Cadets within the scope of my observations.

It is evident that there who have met with honors with emotions differing with their circumstances. The classes who are yet in the midst of their course, attend to my remarks with calmness and reasoning, disturbed by no visions of freedom from military restraint—agitated by no prospect of immediate discharge from the hands of pupilage, and, among those who are to enjoy a furlough, excited by no anticipation of a speedy welcome at home, amidst the scenes of childhood, from parents and sisters and brothers and servants in the household.

But the Graduating Class are, probably, possessed by all these sentiments and hopes. They have finished their course—they have received their diplomas—they have ascertained their relative standing—they have purposes of their country, in sending them here to be educated, they have, so far forth, accomplished. It is an hour of intense emotion with them; but it is not the future only which they see beckoning them on forward upon its untried ocean: the Past, the Past is beckoning on to them, as by an unseen force upon the stern. They cannot go unless they leave behind them these halls, this plain, these academic halls, these towering rocks, these surroundings. They stand—like the famous picture of GARRICK between actress Tragedy and matron Comedy—poised in equipoise between equal and opposing forces. Memory holds them back from Hope. In the crisis of their fresh life they are waiting to receive from my lips words of congratulation, of warning and of advice.

Let me, then, attempt the pleasing duty first of congratulating the Graduating Class on the honorable termination of their novitiate, as Cadets. These diplomas are the witnesses of the approbation of the Academic Board. I congratulate you, young gentlemen, for obtaining these valuable testimonials. I know that you will cherish them, more and more, as you advance in life. When the academic garland of your youth shall have faded and dissolved in the perspective of the intervening years of your advancing age, you will love to recall the pleasure that your diplomas now afford you. Your children, and return the appearance of these hands of your predecessors, which may then be mouldering in the dust.

Now will

[illegible] military ranks. Whenever graduates have joined the walks of civil life, they have proved themselves worthy of the best citizenship. Whenever the Military arm of the State or Country, has been called upon to protect the rights of property, or to quell the violence of a mob, the graduates of this Academy have been found in the front rank of the battle, and have never failed to do their duty. And when the Country has been called upon to defend its rights against the encroachments of a foreign foe, the graduates of this Academy have been found in the front rank of the battle, and have never failed to do their duty. And wherever the Flag of our Country has been assailed, wherever the Eagle has been made to quail, wherever the Star-Spangled Banner has been trampled upon, there the graduates of this Academy have been found [illegible] of Primary School [illegible] Catholic [illegible] Ward, [illegible] very satisfactorily. This is a pleasant school, and well managed.

There is also other school in the Ward, connected with the Catholic interest, which we have not yet ascertained by visiting. There are accommodations in the school building for about 600 pupils.

Apart from the Catholic School, there were registered in the month of the Thirteenth Ward 2,722 pupils, of present under the care of 72 teachers, of whom 5 are men and 70 women. The whole number, as compared with the Sixteenth Ward, amounts 2,722 for Thirteenth, and 4,040 for Sixteenth Ward. Adding the Catholic boys' school, makes the numbers nearly equal.

The Gambling Automaton.

On invitation, we went on Friday to see an automaton, at No. 502 Broadway. Its appearance is not very compromising, reminding us somewhat of a cross between the figure of an Egyptian and that of a man with the diving apparatus about him.

The story is about the size of the big drum of a military band, and round it are windows through which one may come to look and satisfy himself that there is no boy within, to do the work of the rival of the modern Mamelon. On being wound up, the automaton walked across the floor, waddling along very much on an exceedingly fat man would that had got the pest and fetters tightly bound over his ancles. The operator worked an air pump attached to the made-man's chest, and it began to articulate words. We were not able to catch every sound, but after it had got warmed up it was discovered to be speaking of itself—"Here—you—see—a—tri—umph—of—sci—ence," &c., &c.

If the automaton did really this talking and walking by virtue of its springs, pipes, and other mechanism of mortal make, it did a work that the world would stop and wonder at. But the skeptics insisted that a curious motion that the automaton enjoyed while standing was suspicious. The little windows that seemed to let a body look right through the centre of the man, they said reminded them of the way College boys look through their English sometimes, by virtue of curiously placed mirrors—that all the vocal sounds were produced upon one note exclusively, like a boy spelling his words at some dame's school, where the variety of machinery to produce vowels and consonants, mutes, diphthongs, and liquids, would surely require varying "lip," "bell," and "mouthing," to use an organ builder's phrase.

There were several literary, scientific and shrewd men present to see the automaton, but none so carefully observed it as Mr. Barnum, who, after trying the stops for a while, remarked to the inventor, "My good friend, your great trouble will be to prove to the world that there is not a boy inside. Whether there is or not you know,—he is so large and there is so nice a place for a boy in there that they'll say there is. Indeed if it were in my Museum, everybody would swear there was a man inside." Then pending a general discussion of historic automata, and especially of the famous chess player, who so long supported a man, but was forced to surrender its secret at last, we left. It was a funny thing to hear and see at any rate, and if there was a man inside, we hope he had a good time of it listening to the discussion. It must have been hot work for him.

A Criminal Case in Court.

On Friday a comical affair occurred at the Supreme Court. It appears that on the 1st day of June a young man by the name of John Willis enlisted in the Navy, and was sent on board the North Carolina. On the 14th of this month a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed, stating that he was drunk at the time of his enlistment. A writ was granted, demanding of the commandant of the North Carolina to produce said Willis, which order was given to one of the attorneys who petitioned for the writ. He went on board the vessel, and producing the order, the man was given up to him, the attorney in return giving a receipt as he would for a bagshead of molasses. The prisoner and his counsel then left the vessel, and that is the last time they have been seen them.

Yesterday the officer of the North Carolina appeared before Judge Morris, to inquire what had been done with Willis. His Honor replied that the man had not been brought before him. The Commandant then related the circumstance of his leaving the ship. The Judge immediately ordered the Clerk, Mr. Richard Busted, to write a note to the counsel, requesting his company up to Court—which was done, and the lawyer appeared. He said that he received the man from the ship, and supposed that he was discharged, and that there was no more trouble, so he did not watch him. They went to his office, and seen Mrs. Willis, the mother of the man, who was present, requested her son to go out with her to do some business. To this the counsel made no objections. They were gone some time; finally Mrs. Willis returned, and said that her son would be in soon, and that she would not wait; so she left. The sharp lawyer "smelt no rat" and the odor did not reach him until he received the note of the Clerk.

His Honor directed the woman to be produced, which was done. The young man had left the city and his mother "knew he was out," but she refused to tell where he had gone. His Honor told her that if her son was produced, he would probably be discharged; but if he was not, he could be arrested as a deserter, and punished as such. He held Mrs. Willis and her counsel responsible for the desertion if he was not to be found.

The parties left the Court room looking vacant, and saying little or nothing.

Neatest Editor at Sea.

A "late Surgeon," on board one of our steamships, thinks that the man who "queried," the other day, is particularly ignorant of medical ethics at sea. He says:

"The Surgeons of the Collins steamers receive $40 per month, those of the Continental lines $50 per month. No reasonable person will imagine that this pay alone will support a man who has spent years in acquiring the most noble of professions, and who wishes to keep well posted up by a liberal outlay for books, &c. This is so well understood by the different Companies, that it is left entirely to the Surgeon's discretion, what to charge, and if any mere grumbler makes a fool of himself by complaining to the Captain, he is most politely informed, 'that is a matter I leave entirely to my Physician's discretion.'"

Do question, &c., but wouldn't it be better, if such is the rule, to nail up the Fee-bill in the cabin, that a man may know what the luxury of being sick is to cost him?

Dr. S. H. Cox.

The New-Haven Register says that Dr. Cox has perfectly regained his health, the failure of which was the cause of his resignation of his former pastorship; and he proposes soon to accept the charge of one of three Societies, who have extended him urgent invitations to settle. One of these is that of the new church edifice built by Chauncey Jerome, of New-Haven, now nearly completed—as large a salary being tendered to him as he may desire. A similar offer has been made by a church recently created in Rochester, and the third that of a Society in Owego, where the doctor now resides. The probability is the Register thinks, that he will accept the call to New-Haven.

Police News.

THE GAMBLERS—WHO WARNED THEM TO BE READY!

Patrick Kearns, Wm. E. Allen and John N. Briggs appeared on Saturday before Justice Brennan, of the Second District, to answer the information against them for keeping houses for the purpose of gambling.

Mr. C. M. Vandervoort (lately employed on the Express, now a clerk in the office of the Mayor, or Commissioners of Police) stated that he is a policeman; he knows Kearns by sight; was at his house, No. 687 Broadway, on the night of the arrest; did not then recognise the defendant. In reply to Mr. Justice Brennan, he stated that neither then nor at any other time had he cast any gambling implements in the house. The attorney for the prosecution (Mr. Hope) explained that the Mayor had desired Mr. Vandervoort to make a certain affidavit, requesting information, according to the best of his knowledge.

Mr. Vandervoort stated that the Mayor had an official list of the gambling houses furnished by the Captains of Police.

The Magistrate said that on the same evidence he could not be satisfied further, and no distinct evidence had been adduced. Kearns was entitled to be discharged.

In the case of Allen, Mr. Vandervoort stated he had no evidence beyond the general rumor of the neighborhood. Does not know whether he could obtain evidence from the neighbors, but possibly the reports furnished by the officers to the Mayor would answer that purpose. That case was also dismissed.

In John N. Briggs' case, no evidence being forthcoming, the Magistrate observed to Mr. Vandervoort: "I hope, when you make a complaint again, you will get evidence to back you up. This is making a farce of the thing." So it ended—another officer of the Court observing that "an enormous splurge had been made, from which no good, but some harm had resulted."

The investigation being closed, some exciting conversation took place. Mr. Vandervoort was asked by one of the parties, (Briggs) why it was that his place, dark and obscure as it was, and whereon gambling had been proved, had been selected for attack, while other places brilliantly lighted up, well-known notorious places, had been passed over. He seemed anxious that the Press should urge the enquiry "who it was that gave Hearne timely notice and also Hall to have their houses closed and in readiness for the Police two hours before their anticipated arrival." That they had notice, Hearne distinctly affirms that "a man, whom he had never before seen in his life, came and warned him" the same evening of the intended visit of the Police. And Brady, who was caught the same night, declares that it was because Hearne thought the warning would be general that he did not send him word; Hearne told him so. Their impression is that it was an intended affair of "black mail;" they think there was complicity, and ever that the discovery of the "mysterious stranger" would throw unexpected light on the matter.

BRUTAL ASSAULT—PROBABLE MURDER.

At a late hour on Saturday evening a number of laborers had a quarrel in a porter-house in West, between Troy and Gansevoort streets. The dispute getting pretty warm, the parties left the liquor store somewhat intoxicated, and renewed the quarrel on the street. From words they came to blows, and one of them, a laborer named Wm. White, lifted a paving stone weighing about three pounds and battered in the skull of Ezekiel McDonnell, his opponent. White was immediately arrested by Officer Harris, of the Ninth Ward, and locked up for the night. In the morning he was brought before Justice Brennan, who committed him to await the result of the injuries inflicted. McDonnell was conveyed in an insensible condition to his residence at No. 737 Washington street, where he lies in a precarious condition. The physicians say that it is impossible that he can survive.

A POLICY DEALER ARRESTED.

Wm. Seaman, doing business as a policy dealer at No. 304 Greenwich-street, was arrested on Saturday evening by Officer Martin, of the Second District Police Court, on the complaint of Charles Nelson, of No. 28 Columbia-street. The officer was present while he sold out more than a dozen policy tickets. After making the arrest, Seaman requested time to fill up his day book, which he did, and half a dozen additional tickets were sold after the arrest was made. Seaman took the matter coolly. He says if he is not allowed to go on in the business he will break up every shop in the City. His place was the resort of laborers and negroes; the tickets costing from sixpence to a quarter. On Sunday morning he was brought before Justice Brennan, and held to bail in $300.

ALLEGED CASE OF SEDUCTION.

Yesterday a man named James Wood was arrested on the charge of having seduced Mary McMullen, on the promise of marriage. The complainant alleges that the accused, by false promises and protestations, effected her ruin on the 6th of May last. It appears from the papers that the complainant and accused boarded in the same house, where their intimacy ripened into love, and their love into dishonor. She says she saw him about three weeks ago, when she reminded him of his promise, but he had forgotten all about it, and declined to become her wedded lord. A warrant for his arrest was placed in the hands of Officer Murray, who served it on the accused on Thursday evening. Justice Pearsey committed him to answer, in default of $1,000 bail.

STARTLING AFFRAY—FUNNY SCENE IN THE CELLS.

At a rather early hour on Sunday morning a party of shoemakers while playing a game of cards had a difference, and a quarrel ensued. Shortly after the party differed they left the house in which they had been playing, No. 62 Montgomery-street, and went out to the street to settle it in a roomy and honorable manner. In the fight a man named Daniel Ryan was stabbed in the side with a shoemaker's knife by Henry Brown. The injuries were so severe that the wounded man was unable to appear before Justice Wood on Sunday morning to make the complaint. The police of the Seventh Ward took Brown and Michael Shannahan, in whose house they had been playing cards, into custody as an accessory. Shannahan, when taken to the Station-house, was placed in the same cell with a man named Thomas Griffen, who was arrested on the charge of assault and battery. In the morning Shannahan discovered that he had been robbed of six five dollar gold pieces, his pocket-book containing ten dollars in silver, paper, and a one dollar gold piece. Griffen was searched, and the bills and the one dollar gold piece were found secreted in the lining of his clothing, but the pocket-book, the silver, and the six five dollar gold pieces were nowhere. In the morning, (Sunday,) the parties were brought before Justice Wood, and Shannahan, in the most piteous tones, begged of the Judge to administer a dose of "jollup" to Griffen, so that he might recover his gold. He believed the gold was secreted in the intestines of the accused, and a regular dose of medicine would bring it again to the light of the world. It was all the money he said he had in the world, and he didn't like to lose it while there was a chance of recovering it. Griffen stood, the picture of martyred innocence, expecting that justice would deal out an extra dose of "jollup" right away, but the Magistrate doubting the efficacy of medicine in this case, was lenient enough to commit him for trial on the charge of grand larceny.

ARREST OF A PICKPOCKET.

George Matthews, a colored gentleman, who has an itching for other folks property, was brought before Justice Connolly, on Sunday morning, charged with picking a gentleman's pocket on board the Vanderbilt Steamboat. He was detected in the act.

Justice Connolly's Explanation of his Official Conduct.

Police Court, Friday, June 12, 1853.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Tribune:

Sir: I was surprised at seeing in your paper this morning an article relating in a most unwarrantable manner on me for having committed a grossly partial Ely Warbrooke Butler to prison. Had the article even a semblance to a shadow of truth, I would take pleasure in the justice of your attack, and admire your readiness to expose abuses, which, if they existed, every one would unhesitatingly condemn. But when the official character of a man is assailed by such an evidently ill-timed article in a paper of such responsibility and circulation as the Tribune, it is due to himself, to you and the public, that they should be convinced at fully as they were propagated, and in quite as strong terms. I might not have thought it, were I a private citizen, to notice the injustice of your reflections, but as a public officer, having a sacred trust to fulfill, it is incumbent on me not to allow, for one moment, charges unsanctioned that may unfasten on the shrine of justice, which is to my desire as sacred as (any) and as far as I can, sincerely. A man in duty to make mistakes, and unless they are the result of designedness, or culpable negligence, I think the Tribune, on reflection, will be the first to acknowledge it. In the case of Butler, there were no mistakes made by me. He was discharged on a hideous charge, no you state, but by me; nor do you deny it in the editorial, but in consideration of his own misconduct, and as I learned after his commitment, his previous disposition. Not content with the Butler case you push forward your supposition, and embrace the case of Catharine McDermot, as if your whole object was to overwhelm me with a coup de main. That I was mistaken in my case, I confess. I said so to the Governess of the Almshouse, and they liberated her. Should I have done the reverse? Did you ever hear of a new trial given for a mistake in a Judge's charge, or an oversight of a jury? Do you believe there are none who have not unjustly suffered because they had not at hand the means of disproving the appearance of their guilt? There was sufficient evidence against the girl to convince my conscience. She was convicted, I presume you are unknown, and had not the power to resist but by her own assertion—the charge made against her. Was I to believe the prisoner and doubt the evidence? After she was convicted I took some trouble to learn her character, and finding it good, endeavored to correct the injury she suffered.

I hope you will, not so much for my sake as for the sake of the official position I occupy, insert this and the accompanying affidavits in your extensive and influential paper, and not feel offended, when I state that the article in your paper was a tissue of errors, both in the facts set forth and the inferences deduced.

Yours respectfully, MICHAEL CONNOLLY.

STEPHEN WILSON'S AFFIDAVIT.

Stephen Wilson, of No. 249 Tenth-street, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that on the 12th day of June, 1853, at the City of New-York, in the county of New-York, Eli W. Butler, now here, was in Broad-st, No. 12, and that he was brawling, quarreling, using profane, indecent, insulting, abusive, opprobrious and threatening language, causing a noise and disturbing the peace. Deponent further says that said Butler came into the store and offered books for sale, and upon being told that he had other business to do besides buying books, but they were about to call the roll, and deponent then requested him several times to leave, which he refused to do; he then got out on the sidewalk and walked up and down past the store, using abusive language towards foreigners, Bishop Hughes, Cross John, &c., having a tendency to a breach of the peace, and deponent then went for an officer, and procured Officer Walsh, who came and requested said Butler to leave, and upon his refusal the said Walsh arrested him and was obliged to employ force to get him away.

STEPHEN WILSON.

Sworn to before me, June 12, 1853.

Michael Connolly, Police Justice.

WALTER WALSH'S AFFIDAVIT.

Walter Walsh, of First Ward Police, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that on this 12th day of June, inst., Eli W. Butler, now present, was in Broadstreet, in front of the public store, offering books for sale, and had a large crowd of persons collected about him. Deponent, at the request of the storekeepers, requested said Butler to leave, which he refused to do, stating that he had a perfect right to stay there, whereupon deponent arrested said Butler, who then resisted deponent, and deponent had to use force to bring him to this office.

WALTER WALSH.

Sworn before me, this 12th day of June, 1853.

Michael Connolly, Police Justice.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—June 14.

COLLISION IN NORTH RIVER—COMING TOO NEAR THE PIERS.

Frederick M. Victor et al. vs. The Propeller Central Rock.—This libel was filed by the owners of the Brig bark Caroline to recover the damage occasioned to her by a collision with the Cement Rock, which occurred on the night of October 15, 1852, at Pier No 8 in the North River. The Caroline, which had been lying on the north side of that pier, was to be taken out of her slip by the steamboat Oregon to go to sea. Pier No. 8 is a long pier, piers Nos. 9 and 10 are short ones, and pier No 11 is a long one. There were vessels lying at the ends of piers Nos. 8 and 11, leaving but a narrow gap of about a ship's length through which the Caroline had to come out. The tug was on her larboard side and the ship came out at the rate of ten one or two miles an hour, being under the control of an experienced pilot, who was directed by an experienced harbor-master. As the Caroline came out of the gap, a line which had been carried to a vessel at the end of pier No. 8, to assist in turning her round in the slip, became entangled so that it could not be readily cast off, which caused her to move more slowly, but this was not attributable to any neglect of those on board the Caroline.

As the head of the Caroline projected out into the stream, the Cement Rock was discovered coming from a post up the river, bound to Brooklyn; she was then passing Pier No. 12, which is 300 feet above Pier No. 11, and was out in the river from 150 to 200 feet, and running at the rate of from six to seven miles an hour. The Caroline was then 150 feet off, and rung to stop and to back; the signals to go ahead were disobeyed, but not the signal to back, in consequence of the engine refusing on the centre; her pilot put the helm to starboard, but her course was not materially changed, and she came into the Caroline amidships.

Motion by the Court—That upon the testimony no negligence or improper conduct is discovered on the part of the Caroline; that when she discovered the Cement Rock, she could not go ahead, and had drifted a little with the tide so that she could not be backed into the slip. That the Cement Rock, in coming down the river as she did, with an engine that would catch on its centre, was a fertile source of doing damage to some of the vessels that are almost constantly coming out of the slips; and that there was no necessity for her running so near the piers.

That the Cement Rock could have taken any course, like a vessel with the wind free, while the Caroline, like a vessel close-hauled, could pursue but one course, and it was therefore the duty of the propeller to have avoided it.

That if steam vessels take such a dangerous course as running so near the end of the piers, they must expect to be made liable for all consequences, which might reasonably be foreseen.

That the collision was occasioned by the negligence of the Cement Rock.

DECISION—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE TAX LAW OF 1853—POWERS OF ASSESSORS—TONS.

Hogan vs. DePeyster, Administrator with the will annexed of J. Clendening's.—Mr. J. Clendening, the testator, at his decease left 1,000 shares of $100 each, in the stock of the United States Bank—the national institution.

The charter of the bank expired March 4, 1835, and on Feb 8, 1836, the State of Pennsylvania chartered the "United States Bank," the institution of that State, which was intended to take the place of the former institution, and as was generally supposed, would do so to a great extent. The will provided that the testator's real and personal property should be converted into money, as soon as convenient after his decease, and the proceeds securely invested in the most productive manner, leaving it, however, to the discretion of the executor to decide how it should be invested.

The will says, "the bulk part of my personal estate as is now invested in bank stock to remain on its present state, so long as they may deem it most for the interest of my family." By an arrangement between the State and the national institutions the stock of the latter was transferred to the former. The defendant did nothing to aid in the transfer, and when asked to take measures to make the old bank liable, no proof was shown that he pursued a course unsatisfactory to the plaintiffs. He acted in this respect under the advice of counsel, who instructed him that it was inexpedient to attempt such a suit after dividends had been accepted from the State institutions.

Mitchell, J.—The testator died Jan. 28, 1836, and must therefore specially have referred to this stock in the clause of his will above referred to, and known that the institution therein referred, would have applied to such stock, which formed a large part of his estate. He must have known that the National Institution would not then probably be rechartered, and must therefore be considered as sanctioning the continuance of this stock, either in that bank or in one substantially similar, which might be regarded in some degree as its successor.

If Congress had rechartered the same bank, the case would have been clear; but here a State Institution took the place of a national one, without any just reason to apprehend any loss in consequence of the change in its character. Under such circumstances, the intention of the testator that the stock to remain in the State in which it was at the testator's decease, to be taken as the trust of that stock did, except the part substituted by the United States; and then finding it so transferred, by a common consent of the stockholders, he received the dividends on the new stock. This was not a new investment.

The case of Ackerman vs. Smith, 14 Barb. S. C. R., and others, shows that although an executor is liable for an unauthorized investment by himself on personal security or bank stock, he is not liable for such investments made by his testator or ancestor. In the present case, I think the Administrator was justified in allowing the change of investment to be made.

It is generally believed that when the charters of old banks have expired, their stock has been transferred to the new bank of the same name, unless different directions have been made, and that general assent occurs. This shows that the administrator was guilty of no negligence in not interfering with the transfer that was made.

TAXATION ON MUTUAL COMPANIES.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New-York vs. The Board of Supervisors.—By the Court—Roosevelt, J.—This is a claim on the part of one of sixty corporations, similar mutual life insurance companies, for the law, although seemingly general, applies to no others, to be in effect exempt from taxation. With a fund amounted in these institutions amounting, as appears, to nearly three millions, they claim that by an act of the Legislature, passed, we may presume, at their request, they are exempt from taxation, they were to be taxed as if their capital was limited to the comparatively insignificant sum of $100,000.

By the act referred to it was provided that any Mutual Life Insurance Company organized under the provisions of the General Insurance Law of 1849, should be subject to taxation in the same manner as if it was incorporated under the General Law with a capital of 100,000. Construing this act in connection with the previous legislation of the State, and interpreting it by its relationship with the principles of equal taxation, the courts, and as I believe, very generally, hold that the specially favorable corporations created under the old charter system, were not to be placed upon more favorable terms—and no better—as those organized under the General Law; which, instead of limiting the amount of their capital, authorize an $100,000 capital, thereby throwing it in their power to increase indefinitely their fund of indebtedness.

The $100,000 provision, it was held, had the same meaning both in the act of 1849 and in the general act of '48, to which that of '53 referred—and in the act of '48 its object obviously and indisputably was to fix a minimum instead of a maximum—a minimum of capital and not a maximum of taxation.

The act of June, 1853, was so clearly framed in the interest of the two corporations in question. Its language, without being direct and striking, was, upon close consideration, susceptible of, if it did not grammatically require, the interpretation subsequently sought to be put upon it. Having later, however, as we have seen, in the course, to establish that interpretation, whatever attempt, it would seem, by or on behalf of the companies, was made upon the legislative department in the form of a quasi appeal from the Judiciary; and in March, 1853, an act was then hastily passed by the Legislature of that year to declare the true legislative meaning of your predecessors in the act of June, 1853—in other words, an act of the Legislature to reverse the act of the Court.

The clauses, however, are now met by a new difficulty. Before the act of June, 1853, went into operation, the Legislature, it appears, overlooking, we may presume, what they had done then, twenty days previously before—not an uncommon occurrence in the closing session of a Legislative session—passed a new tax law applicable to all incorporated companies, chartered or general, liable to taxation "on their capital or otherwise."

By this act not only the capital stock proper of all such companies, but their surplus profits or reserved funds exceeding 10 per cent., were expressly directed to be taken into account in the same manner as the other assessed of real estate of the county. Elsewhere, in the consideration of the act of June, what it may, was a palpable repeal in July of its provisions, and a substitution of a more comprehensive enactment in its place—a circumstance wholly overlooked, it would seem, by the authors of the declaratory act of '53. That act, declaring, as it did, "the true intent and meaning" of the act of June, '53, and of that act only, merely directing what construction should be given by the Courts to an act which, in effect, had long since been repealed, and left the general law of July, '49 untouched, to be applied to every company alike, whether organized under the old system of special charters, or the new system of free grants.

And why should any distinction be made between them? Especially, why should the two particular companies in question be taxed only on $100,000 each, while every other company in the same City, and standing on the same footing, is assessed on its "reserved funds?" The constitutionality of such legislation—even if expressly intended and clearly expressed—might well be doubted. But the Court will not presume that the Legislature intended to violate either the spirit or letter of the Constitution, and will not, therefore, give to their acts a construction which would imply such intention. Equality of taxation is a fundamental principle of our Government, which no Legislature, in the absence of the most explicit provisions, will be presumed to have intended to violate.

The Assessors, it seems, in the case of the present Company, misled by the peculiar wording of the act of June, 1853, taxed them only on $100,000. But the Tax Commissioners, on reviewing the assessment roll, added $800,000, making the sum total one million, one hundred thousand; and the Board of Supervisors subsequently, on the application of the Company, refused to remove the original assessment, and confirmed the judgment of the Commissioners; upon which the Company sued out a mandamus to compel the Supervisors to reverse their action in the matter; and the case now comes up on a demurrer to the answer of the Supervisors—or rather, on an appeal to the General Term of the Court from the decision of the Judge at Special Term, sustaining the Supervisors.

What, then, we are to inquire, are the powers of the Tax Commissioners—can they, in such cases, correct the errors of the Ward Assessors?

They have power, it is said, to add to the assessment roll and assess any real or personal estate, liable to taxation, which may not have been assessed, but they cannot lower the valuation as made by the assessors. As to real estate, which is always specific, the rule may be so. Who is the local officer, after inspecting a particular house and lot, put upon it a certain value, there may become reason, though none is very usual, for lowering or raising, not permitting the Commissioners to raise such value. But what reason is there for such a proposition in the case of personality? The assessors, in estimating the tax-payers' personal property, do not value any particular stock of goods, or household furniture, or bonds and mortgages, but present estate generally. When, therefore, in such cases they put the amount too low, it is invariably almost an error not of undervaluation but of omission. And it is conceded the power of the tax Commissioners, however limited in other respects, extends at all events to supplying the omissions of the ward officers, whether the property omitted be personal or real. Now the Supervisors in their answer allege—and the allegation is admitted by the demurrer—that in the assessment of the personal property of this Company, there was an omission among other items of $2,343,681 in bonds and mortgages, which were "part of the capital, surplus profits, or reserved fund of the Company," and which the Assessors did not set down or estimate, in consequence of the erroneous impression they laboured under, not as to the value of those securities, but as to the law of the State, applicable to them. They mistook the law, and under that mistake inserted only the nominal capital of $100,000. In other words, they omitted the "surplus reserved fund," they omitted it altogether. Was it not then both the right and the duty of the Commissioners to supply the omission? The only error of the Commissioners, as it seems to me, at either, however, of which the relators have no reason to complain—was, not in adding, but in adding too little—in adding less than one million, instead of more than two.

It has been said, that if the Commissioners are allowed to possess this power of raising the amounts set down by the Assessors, great injustice may at times be done to particular individuals, as no provision is made by law for giving notice of the contemplated augmentation. And does not this objection apply with equal force to the addition of an omitted house, as to the addition of an omitted mortgage. Suppose a case in which the Assessors should have omitted wholly the personal estate of a particular individual—may not the Commissioners insert it? Even the counsel of the company at bar admitted that in such a case the Commissioners might insert the personality so omitted. And yet the argument, from want of a notice, is the same in both instances. All that can be said properly on this point is that the statute if defective, and that the defect, although remedied in actual practice by the Commissioners, should be corrected, as matter of right, by the Legislature.

The relators, it appears, had notice. They argued before the Commissioners, and they appealed to the Supervisors. They were heard by both and were not considered as wronged by either. And such, too, after full hearing, was the opinion of the Special Term.

There is clearly no equity in the relators' case. They seek to establish for themselves a special privilege, at the expense of the rest of the community, and incompatible with the equal rights of all other companies but one engaged in the same business. Such claims, to be available, must be clearly made out, and strictly pursued to sustain them (if so pursued at all) being at variance with common right, are to be strictly construed. So construing the statutes cited by the relators, the position taken by them is as untenable in law as in equity.

Judgment of Special Term affirmed with costs.

SPECIAL TERM—June 16.

Before Hon. Justice Cowles.

BLOOMINGDALE SQUARE TO BE BUILT UP.

In re Bloomingdale square.—This matter came up this morning on a motion to postpone the confirmation of the report of the Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment until December next. Messrs. R. J. Dillon and O. H. Striker, Jr., appeared for the motion, and Mr. Robinson in opposition. This square was laid out on the City map in 1811, when this City was laid out in streets and roads, under the act of 1807, and has remained in a plot and been used for farming or agricultural purposes up to this period. It is contended on the part of the opponents of the square that the land comprised in it constitutes about 22 acres, and that the Commissioners in valuing the land estimated it at too high a price—the amount awarded for the land by the Commission is about $310,000. This sum is awarded to the Astor, the Hegeman and the Striker estates. This sum, together with the costs of the proceeding, including commissioners' fee, attorneys' fee and advertising, amounts in the aggregate to the enormous sum of $410,501 02, which is assessed on the surrounding or adjacent land. It was contended that the Central Park afforded ample park room for the health of the City and the recreation of the citizens; and that, as this square lay at the foot of the Central Park, it was wholly unnecessary for the purpose to which it had originally been dedicated, and should be closed. That this land, lying in this suburban region, would be heavily assessed for the Central Park, and that great injustice would be done by assessing the sum of $400,000 on the property owners. On the other side it was contended that the owners of the land in the Park were unable to use the land so as to derive any pecuniary benefit or income from it, and were constantly subjected to extraordinary charges in the way of taxes and assessment, and that the square should either be built or closed without delay.

The Court thought that if the Central Park should be built, there would be no use for Bloomingdale square; and that as the report of the Central Park Commissioners would be ready in September, he should postpone the further hearing of Bloomingdale square until December next. Ruled accordingly.

SUPERIOR COURT—General Term—June 16.

Before Hon. Justices Oakley, Duer, Crowell, Sutherland and Hoffman.

PRECEDENTS.

Chesebrough vs. House.—Order of Special Term allowing appeal affirmed.

McQuade vs. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company.—New trial ordered on payment of costs.

The Kents County Bank vs. Pickering.—Motion for new trial denied.

Stokes vs. Johnson.—Motion for new trial denied.

Phelps, Executor, &c. vs. The Hudson River Railroad Company.—New trial ordered. Costs to abide event.

Brown vs. Shearer.—Judgment affirmed with costs.

Dillingham vs. Weeden.—Judgment affirmed with costs.

Avery vs. The Sun Mutual Insurance Company.—Judgment affirmed, with liberty to the defendant to answer within 20 days, on payment of costs.

Gallagher vs. Gilbert.—Very nice question, argued by counsel pro and con.

Governor vs. Stannard.—Motion for new trial had on.

Bennett vs. Van Syckel.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Blakely vs. Stewart.—This case comes from the order made at Special Term.

Judgment was that the contract was a violation of Pennsylvania, a warrant was issued against him on the complaint of Mr. Blakely, and a requisition was made by the Governor of this Province upon the Governor of Pennsylvania, for his delivery to the officers of this State. Under this requisition he was brought to this City, and here he was indicted by the Grand Jury for larceny. He, however, gave bail, and was leaving the Court-room, when he was arrested by the Sheriff, by virtue of an order of arrest granted in this action. The facts on which this order of arrest was granted are substantially the same as those on which he was indicted by the Grand Jury. Upon the defendant moving to be discharged from arrest, the plaintiff, in his affidavit, stated that he had not procured the defendant to be brought through State for the purpose of having him arrested, that he was not aware that the defendant was liable to be arrested at a certain date, and that the attorney of this State until after the indictment was found against him, where he was informed of that fact by his attorney, and, therefore, procured to have him arrested.

On these facts, at the special term, the motion to discharge him from arrest was denied. The defendant appealed.

Oakley C. J., after reviewing the facts in the case, said, that where witnesses come from other States either voluntarily or by subpœna, to give evidence in a suit in this State, their presence here could not be taken advantage of to arrest them, or in any way to deprive them of advantages which they lost by so coming into this State. They were under the protection of the Court, and must be vacated. In a case decided in this Court some time since, one defendant was arrested over to this City from Brooklyn, and here served with subpœnas, so as to bring him within the jurisdiction of this Court; it was held that the service was void.

The order at special term must be reversed, so far as it denies the motion to vacate the order of arrest, and set aside summons, defendants stipulating notice being an action for false imprisonment—no costs of the appeal.

Livingston vs. Gorgas—Oakley, C. J.—The plaintiff had a cause on the calendar for fourteen terms. The code provides that term fees must be allowed for all terms in which the case is on the calendar, and not reached or adjourned. By "adjourned," I do not mean postponed at by agreement of the parties, but by order of the Court. In this case it was ordered that the cause should be generally reserved, this was in April, and the term for April, May and June is the same, no action was taken on the matter at the commencement of the May or June term. If the Court ordered the cause to be reserved, and the parties suffered it so to stand for the three terms, they must submit to the taxation. When the Court orders a cause to be reserved, it stands reserved until the Court, on the application of one of the counsel, orders it to be put on the calendar again.

The motion to set aside taxation denied, and judgment affirmed.

Mr. Busted's Contempt Case.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—June 16.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

On Saturday the Court of General Sessions presented an unusual appearance, every available place for standing or sitting being occupied by members of the legal profession and by the general public. We never saw the room so crowded before. It was at least equal to Tammany Hall on a glorious ratification meeting. The occasion of so much interest was the contempt case of Mr. Richard Busted, arising out of some proceedings on Monday last, after the impanelling of a Jury in the trial of Lyman Cole, the alleged accomplice of Kissane in the great Chemical Bank forgery. Great was the anxiety to hear how Mr. Busted, through his counsel, Mr. J. T. Brady, would answer the District Attorney's interrogatories; whether he would purge himself of contempt, or whether the Recorder would really commit him for the offence charged.

The District Attorney, on coming into Court, said there were two motions to quash indictments noticed for this morning, and inquired if his Honor wished to hear them?

The Recorder replied that he was here for the purpose of hearing the proceedings in the case of contempt.

The District Attorney—In that case, then, I have acted upon your Honor's instructions and filed the interrogatories, having received notice from the counsel on the other side that they would attend to the matter this morning.

Mr. Brady rose and said he appeared for Mr. Busted, in obedience to the requirement of an order entered on the minutes of the Court on Monday, the 13th of June, and which he would refer to in order to have a distinct understanding of the character of the matter that was now to be considered. The order was, "That Richard Busted, Esq., show cause before this Court to-morrow morning, at the opening thereof, why he should not be proceeded against for a contempt committed in the immediate view and presence of the Court during in sitting this day, directly tending to impair the respect due to its authority." On the following day the interrogatories were propounded, and since that time nothing had been done, as appeared from the minutes of the Court, at all events to be referred to, on this occasion, except the postponement of the answers until to-day. This proceeding was taken under the provision contained in the second section of the Revised Statutes, page 276, which authorizes a Court, in a summary way, to punish for contempt committed in its presence. This was all that he needed to refer to at the present stage of this proceeding by way of preferring the answers prepared to the interrogatories that were presented here. If the learned District Attorney, who might be regarded as condemning, no doubt from proper cause, the case on the stand also, did not object, and if it did not occur to the Court that there was any impropriety in his (Mr. Brady's) proceeding in this form, he does not to say a few words about this matter before reading the answers. It was exceedingly unpleasant to him to appear in this proceeding at all; and it would be difficult for any one to understand the feelings and truth that actuated him without understanding the relations that existed between the Court and himself and the respondent and himself which always had been, and he hoped always would be, characterized by respect for them professionally, and friendship for them individually. And he said to the Court now, at the outset, not because of that personal feeling, but simply from a regard to the high duty which he thought their profession, above all others, owed to the dignity of the legal tribunals in this country, that if he had not been able to prepare for Mr. Busted a set of truthful and satisfactory answers to these interrogatories, which would convince him he had never designed any contempt, he (Mr. Brady) would have made it a condition of the continuance of any close relations between them in future, that, having done anything calculated to touch the respect due to the dignity of any Court of Justice, he should make ample amends for it. Events occurring daily seemed to admonish us that there was a growing disregard among us for all that was great and noble and worthy—that institutions the most illustrious, and principles the most sacred, were no longer secure from sagacious fol profanity or impudent reproach. And in this generally destining respect there was nothing, perhaps, more prominent, and nothing more lamentable, than the low estimate in which the legal profession seemed likely to be held, and the disrespect with which the institutions of justice seemed likely to be treated. And the men who of the legal profession, whilst they were to discharge faithfully all the trusts reposed in them, and on all occasions fearlessly do their duty, should take care lest, by contributing to a learned appreciation of the Court's dignity, they did not also contribute to a learned appreciation of the law and its dignity, and of all those means of preserving rights and determining justice among men, and maintaining that liberty and security without which no Government can long exist. At the same time he did not know any member of the profession to whom, with more propriety than to His Honor, who was supposed to have been insulted by Mr. Busted, he could say that there must be occasions when, in the zeal and earnestness, and fidelity to duty of counsel, there would seem to grow up a collision between the Court and the bar, when, so far as the bar was concerned, no disrespect was intended. And he believed that when he read the answers to these interrogatories it would be perceived that the proceeding which had called Know-Nothing Meeting.

Part of the New-York members of the late Know-Nothing Convention at Philadelphia have called a meeting, to be held in the Park this afternoon.

Its object is probably to endorse their action in that Convention. That action consisted in a vigorous attempt to outbid slaveholders themselves, in the contest for slaveholding votes. According to the reports that have reached us of the debates in Convention, the New-York members distinguished themselves by being more ultra in their devotion to the interests of Slavery—more extreme in their submissiveness to its behests than even delegates from the Slaveholding States. Such conduct evidently needs endorsement; and, from such a meeting as their call will gather, they may obtain it. But they are sadly mistaken if they believe they can be sustained for a moment by the popular sentiment or the popular vote of this State. They may receive the cheers of a Park meeting, and may parade resolutions approving their course; but let them once submit their Pro-Slavery platform to a popular canvass, and they will speedily find that New-York will stand by Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana, in resistance to it.

The organ of the Pro-Slavery faction of the Know-Nothing party—the Herald—has discovered already the fatal effect of the attempt made at Philadelphia to drive the Know-Nothings into the support of Slavery. The Herald of yesterday says:

"The Convention at Philadelphia was not needed. The Order was doing remarkably well as it was, and could not be expected to do better. The Know-Nothings of the South could not help the same party at the North to carry their State elections, or vice versa. The only thing which could flow from the National Convention was the quarrel between the Northern and the Southern portions of the Order; and it has wanted little that such a quarrel had taken place. The whole business, in short, was a mistake on the part of the Know-Nothing leaders; and they may thank the strong American feeling pervading the country, and their own fortune, if the blunder has cost them no more."

The Herald puts the best face possible on the matter. The split, it thinks, is likely to help, rather than hurt, the party.

"It cannot be too often repeated, the Know-Nothing party is stronger now than it was before the Convention. For the dangers are known, and the shoals marked with buoys. It may steer boldly onward—it has now little to fear."

This is philosophical. "Faith," said the Irish pilot, "and dont I know every rock in the Channel?" "And faith," he added, as the ship struck and was going down, "there's one of 'em."

It is a misnomer, by the way, to speak of the Philadelphia assembly as a Convention. It was a meeting of the National Council—a session of a regularly organized body; and the secession of Northern members is, therefore, a disruption of the Order. A Convention made up of delegates elected for the special purpose of attending it, would have only temporary power and importance, and a secession from it would, therefore, be of less consequence. But this was a regular meeting of the Supreme Council of the Order—it represented and embodied the nationality of the party, and its disruption is, therefore, a disruption of the party itself.

Bringe Dished.

We learn from reliable authority that the Grand Jury on Friday last dismissed the complaint of Alderman Briggs against the proprietors of the Times for libel, in having called him a nuisance. We nonfess this is making rather short work of the Alderman. He made his complaint on the 13th, and it was dismissed on the 15th. We are not informed upon what grounds this action of the Grand Jury was based; they may not have considered it libelous to call Mr. Briggs an "Aldermanic nuisance"—his character not being in the least degree damagable thereby—or they may have considered the epithet so clearly and notoriously just as to render proof of it in a court of law quite superfluous. We presume, however, that the Grand Jury regarded the article complained of—just as everybody else did—as a deserved rebuke of a man who, being utterly unfit for his place, has permitted himself to be made the cat's paw of men of still less judgment than himself. We have never impeached or doubted the honesty of Alderman Briggs, or the general integrity of his intentions. If he had acted on his own convictions of propriety, he would probably have made a quiet, respectable, inoffensive sort of an Alderman. But he was fooled into believing that he could make a great man of himself—and with the help of his disinterested and sagacious advisers, he succeeded admirably in making himself the butt of public ridicule. All this was, doubtless, his own affair—and would not have been noticed in these columns if it had not come at last seriously to interfere with the public interests, and if public business was for a time blockaded by the utterly ludicrous and inexplicable stupidities which Alderman Briggs was made to father. The thing had become insufferable, and, in the discharge of a public duty, we called public attention to it as a nuisance, which ought to be abated. We are quite sure we rendered the public an essential service thereby; for owing to that or some other cause, the public has not since been troubled by Alderman Briggs.

The Alderman himself, naturally enough, did not relish it, and invoked the protection of the Grand Jury. He complained of the Times, and made oath that he had been extensively damaged in reputation and character by our article. The Grand Jury thought differently, and dismissed his complaint with very little ceremony. And now if the Alderman would look at the matter like a man of sense, and not suffer himself any longer to be humbugged and befooled by men who are using him and his official position to push their own schemes, regardless of his reputation and position as a public officer, he would derive substantial profit from the experience of the past, and would have reason to thank us for the article, on which he and the Grand Jury had the misfortune to differ so widely.

The Privileges of Republics in Europe.

There is at least one oasis in the desert of European Despotism—the territory of those little Alpine commonwealths that compose the Swiss Confederation. For centuries, Switzerland has towered high above surrounding States, a living witness of the blessings and advantages of republican institutions. Switzerland is politically older than Holland, or Prussia, or Belgium, or even that Ottoman Empire for the sake of whose interests France and England are now in arms. Her existence seems, therefore, to have been sufficiently prolonged to entitle her to a full participation in all those privileges which appertain to membership with the European family of nations. As an independent and sovereign State, Switzerland has surely as good a right to shelter the exile and refugee of other lands—as good a right to drive seditious foreigners from her soil—as good a right to protect her own honor, by general legislative enactments, as other members of that family. But though Monarchical States may daily exercise those rights with perfect impunity, yet Republican Switzerland is liable to menace and coercion if she presume to follow their example. The condition of Switzerland amid European despotisms is, in fact, that of an alien. They permit her, indeed, to exist, because her existence is indispensable to the balance of their power; but the insults, and annoyances, and outrages to which they, day after day, subject her, are convincing proofs of the alacrity with which they would conspire to annihilate her, did not their interests, and their fears, and their jealousies, forbid them.

Poor little Switzerland has truly a "hard card" to play with the despots of Europe. A volume could not contain a record of the wrongs which they have inflicted on her; and the limits of a newspaper article would hardly permit us to enumerate those aggressions; but as illustrations of the manner in which her rights are trifled with and trampled on by those oppressors of humanity, we must nevertheless adduce two instances of their habitual ill-treatment of her. One of these occurred about two years back, and was perpetrated by the tyrant of Hapsburg; the other is even now impending over her, and the author of it is no less a personage than his Majesty of Naples.

So blameless was the deportment of Switzerland during the Lombard insurrection of '48, that in the Autumn of that year Baron Kinkelbaum, the Austrian Envoy to Switzerland, addressed a formal dispatch to the Federal Council, in which he eulogized "the loyal and righteous behavior of the Swiss Government towards Austria, and pledged Austria to keep a thankful remembrance thereof." This acknowledgment and assurance on the part of Austria must have been very agreeable at the time to the Swiss Executive. But how did Austria redeem the pledge thus publicly and solemnly given, and requite Switzerland for her "loyal and righteous behavior" in a most critical period? We shall tell. Some few years after the suppression of the Lombard insurrection, the canton of Tessin ventured to expel from its territory eight foreign Capuchin monks, who had been proved guilty of immoral conduct, and who had been actively engaged in opposing the laws of the Commonwealth. The residence of those monks in the canton had never been guaranteed, either by private convention or public treaty; they had entered the cantonal convents without the prescribed authorization of the competent State authorities, and consequently the Government of Tessin had an unquestionable right to expel them from the canton. Neither Prince nor Pope should have interfered in the matter, and least of all, Austria, who owed a debt of gratitude to Switzerland, which she was pledged to repay at the first suitable opportunity. But when did Austria regard pledges or obligations, or the rights of nations? Nor did she now. The moment Austria heard of the expulsion of the eight Capuchins she affected great indignation thereat, and immediately instructed her envoy to demand of the Swiss Government that they should be either reinstalled or pensioned for life. The Federal Executive replied, that the act of the Cantonal Government was legal and justifiable, and refused to comply with one or the other requisition. But what was the answer of Austria to this reply of the Swiss Executive? It was an answer which proclaimed the feelings of the Hapsburg tyrant towards Switzerland, and the respect entertained by him for her rights. The expulsion of eight Capuchins from a Republic was the response of the Austrian despot to the Federal Council! Five thousand innocent, respectful and industrious people, who had never offended against any law, were torn violently from their homes and avocations, and driven back to Tessin, because Francis, eight seditious foreigners had been expelled from that canton, and would not be pensioned or recalled! Such is one of the many methods by which Francis Joseph has manifested his "thankful remembrance" of the "loyal and righteous behavior of the Swiss Government towards Austria" in the hour of her peril. Such is one specimen of the consideration which the despots of Europe entertain for the privileges of Republican States.

The second specimen of that consideration which we shall give is not an almost forgotten outrage of two years old and upwards, but an insolent menace, an impending aggression, which may not yet be perpetrated against Switzerland, and for a knowledge of which we are indebted to the Zurich correspondent of the Washington Union. The offender in the present case is not the Austrian, but, as we have already intimated, the Neapolitan despot. This august personage, having alienated the affections of his own subjects by his oppressive rule, is determined, if possible, to surround the tottering throne of Naples with a guard of Swiss mercenaries. To uphold the tyranny of the Italian Bourbons would doubtless, in the opinion of King Bomba, be a suitable and honorable occupation for the citizens of the Alpine Republics; and in the last century neither the Swiss people nor the Swiss Government would have seen anything disgraceful in it, but now the new Federal Constitution strictly prohibits the revival of that hireling system, which was once the reproach of Switzerland—not leaving to the Swiss Executive the power of supplying the wants of even so importunate a customer as the King of the Two Sicilies. It will not be denied, either in England or on this side of the Atlantic, that the Convention which framed that Constitution was a perfectly legal body, and had an unquestionable right to proscribe and prohibit that infamous practice. But what of that? Ferdinand of Naples wants a guard of Swiss democrats, and must have them, maugre their Constitution. Better, in his opinion, would it be that a thousand Republican Constitutions should be desecrated, than that the throne of one tyrant should be overthrown. Knowing, however, that the Federal Executive had some little reverence for their country's laws, the despot considered it useless, under existing circumstances, to address a simple requisition to them. He thought that if the requisition were coupled with a menace, it would be likely to prove more effective and successful, and therefore a menace was appended to it. The substance of both is as follows: That the King of Naples will expel all Swiss citizens from his dominions, if the Federal Council will not permit His Majesty to open recruiting offices in the cantons, in order to raise and maintain four regiments of fifteen hundred men each. What is the number of Swiss sojourners in the dominions of Naples, we are unable to say; but be it what it may, it is quite evident from the above that those poor people will be driven from their homes and occupations, like the unfortunate Tessinese, unless the Federal Council comply with the requisition of this insolent aggressor and ruthless tyrant. But what ground has this despot for making such a demand of the Swiss Executive? A convention which his father entered into with some of the cantons about thirty years ago, and which, even under the old Constitution, was never sanctioned by the Federal Government, while by the new it has been formally set aside. King Bomba, however, wants Swiss mercenaries, and therefore the Federal Council must legalize that convention, revive the hireling system, and abrogate their present Constitution, or—the Neapolitan tyrant will drive the unoffending, industrious and peaceable Swiss that have the misfortune to sojourn in his dominions, back to their native mountains!

Such is the respect which the despots of Europe have for the rights and liberties of Republican Switzerland. She has been for nearly five centuries an independent and sovereign State, and a member of the great European family of nations, but the pettiest despot of them all is less fettered and interfered with in the exercise of his privileges than the glorious country of Tell.

Police Justice.

Mr. Michael Connolly, Police Justice, makes his appearance in our columns this morning. For the "sake of the official position" he occupies, and to protect the "administration of justice" from reproach, he solicits publicity for what he calls a reply to our comments upon his habit of imprisoning persons and examining their cases afterwards. Mr. Justice Connolly begins his epistle with a great deal of valor and still greater insolence. He talks about having been "assailed by an avalanche of lies,"—and urges the importance of instant and complete reparation. But he very soon changes his tone and craves indulgence for unavoidable mistakes, for which, he insists, "some allowance should be made. And he ends by confessing the substantial truth of every statement we had made, and demonstrating the entire justice of our remarks.

In regard to Catherine McDermott Justice Connolly makes a full confession—as indeed he was compelled to do by his previous note. He sent the girl to prison—kept her there a week,—then examined her case and finding her innocent, advised her discharge. And he very innocently asks whether he "ought to have done the reverse." We beg the Justice to understand that we do not censure him for advising the girl's discharge when he discovered her innocence—but for committing her to prison before he had proved her guilt. It was his business to establish that point before inflicting punishment; and the plea he now puts in that "she was friendless, a pauper, and unknown, and had no power to resist the charge made against her," only aggravates his misconduct. The fact that she was thus poor and friendless, should have made him every effort not to augment her misfortunes by his reckless injustice.

The Butler case is quite on a par. Justice Connolly, in one sentence, asserts that he "made no mistake" in his case; and, in the next, says he discharged him because he "learned, after his commitment, his harmless disposition." Why didn't he learn this before committing him? He probably thought that he, too, was poor, friendless, and unknown; and that his pelty tyranny could be exercised upon him with perfect impunity. And it was not until he discovered that the case was calling public attention to his conduct, that he thought it necessary to inquire into the truth of the charges for which he had sent him to prison. It seems he had two affidavits to act upon—both of which we publish—one of them made by a Mr. Wilson, who swears that Butler walked on the sidewalk "using abusive language towards foreigners;"—and the other, made by a Policeman named Walsh, who testifies that Butler offered books for sale, collected a crowd around him, refused to leave, and asserted his right to stay there. And for that Policeman Walsh arrested him, and Justice Connolly committed him to prison. Both these functionaries, in our opinion, transcended the line of their duty, and are justly amenable to the severest censure. Butler had done nothing whatever in violation of the law. He had committed no breach of the peace,—no act which would for a moment warrant his arrest, and still less his commitment to prison.

We should probably have passed this case without any special comment, but for the fact that it is the second instance within a few days, in which Justice Connolly has pursued a similar course. He seems to be in the habit of sending persons to prison and trying them afterwards. Whether this arises from willfulness, from recklessness, or from a strong liability to make "mistakes" on his part, it seemed to us quite proper that the attention of the public should be called to it. His attempted vindication of his conduct demonstrates the propriety of the course which we pursued.

High Prices.

The Journal of Commerce makes the following suggestion of a remedy for the high prices of produce:

"There appears to be little doubt that the price of farm produce in this City is considerably enhanced by the difficulty experienced by farmers in securing a proper place in which to make their sales. Many of these farmers have been driven away altogether by the obstructions they have to encounter. The following remark of the Washington Star applies with force to this latitude: 'It strikes us that the very best remedy for existing high prices in the Washington markets, will be the speedy preparation of every possible convenience, at nominal charges for their use, for those who sell produce grown by themselves.'"

We are deeply interested,—as is everbody who is compelled to buy,—in reducing the price of farm produce. We should like exceedingly to buy potatoes, cabbages, lettuce, fruits, &c., &c., at the lowest possible rates, and should be glad to aid any scheme that will fairly reduce their present prices. We may make the same remark in regard to everything we are compelled to purchase. We should be glad of an abatement in the cost of our sugar, our tea, our coffee, our cotton goods, our broadcloths,—and especially our printing paper. There is little doubt, more over, in our minds, that the price of all these articles in this City is considerably enhanced by the difficulty experienced in securing a proper place in which to sell them, without paying for it. It is an undeniable fact, of which any one may satisfy himself by a little inquiry, that store-room and even wharf-room, for the landing and sale of these articles, cannot be had without paying for it. This adds very considerably to the price of these commodities—and it strikes us that the very best remedy for existing high prices in our markets, would be the speedy preparation at the expense of the City, of every possible convenience at nominal charges for their use, for those who have anything to sell that any of us are compelled to buy.

We submit to the Journal that, much as we all desire to buy farm produce at low rates, there is not a single reason for furnishing farmers with stores, rent free, at the expense of the City, which will not apply with equal force to planters, manufacturers and importers. If the farmers will do as others do, hire the premises they need for their business, they can come just as closely in contact with consumers as they desire. What they pay to "middlemen" is only rent in another shape.

Debut of Miss Eliza Hensler.

Academy of Music.—There was a good attendance here on Saturday night in spite of the rain—than which nothing is more discouraging to an opera goer. Miss Hensler may feel complimented that she attracted so large an audience with the elements and an off-night against her.

The opera selected for the occasion was Donizetti's "Linda di Chamounix." Although one of the composer's best productions, this opera has failed to take a firm hold on our public. With much sameness and repetition there is a good deal of local coloring and originality in "Linda;" sufficient, at all events, to place it above some other familiar mediocrities by the same composer. It was written for the Italian Opera-House in Berlin, and first performed there in 1842. The next season it was produced with great success in Paris. One reason for the latter is that the libretto is an adaptation from an exceedingly popular vaudeville called "La Grace de Dieu;" another, that the music is of a florid character, abounding in march-like movements, which always captivate the French ear. And for the rest the opera is a pleasing opera, with a nicely balanced romantic story, and plenty of pleasing melodies. Poor Mme. Sontag, and that unfortunate young tenor Pozzolini, were the leading artistes who appeared in "Linda" the last time it was played in New-York. It is not easy to forget the passionate joy with which they clothed the duet "A consolarmi affrettisi," or the exquisite pathos with which the same strain return in Linda after the malediction in the second act.

Miss Hensler has, we believe, sung this role in Italy, and from the fact of her selecting it for her début, we suppose it is one in which she feels most at home. Necessarily a young singer must have a limited repertoire; but were this not so, we doubt if Miss Hensler could have made a better selection. There is an excellent distribution of parts in this opera. Until we listened to it, we had forgotten how many good parts there are in it. The principal baritone, the soprano, the contralto, tenor and bartone roles are excellent, and assist while they relieve the soprano. The cast on Saturday night was creditable to the management, and included the names of Vestvali, Bagiali and Brignoli.

On the appearance of the debutante the house applauded with encouraging gallantry. Without any perceptible nervousness, Miss Hensler commenced the opening scene, and at once enlisted the sympathies of the audience. "O Luce di quest' anima" followed, and was given with feeling and grace, but not otherwise remarkable. The duet with Carlo, "A consolarmi," was artistically rendered so far as Miss Hensler was concerned, but the clumsy execution of Signor Bagiali did not contribute to its effect. Throughout the first act, Miss Hensler preserved the favorable impression she had created, and was called before the curtain and pelted with bouquets in the most approved manner. In the second and third acts, she felt more at home. There was a perceptible improvement, not only in the quantity of her voice, but in her management of it. The duet with the Marquis, and the final portions of the opera were, in all respects, the best efforts of the evening.

The quality of Miss Hensler's voice is sympathetic and sweet. It does not command admiration but beseeches it, and is precisely the voice to strengthen with practice and study. If a conscientious regard be paid to the latter, there can be but little doubt that Miss Hensler will eventually take a high rank among eminent sopranos. Her method is the pure Italian, and so far as it goes, admirable. We should do an injustice to Miss Hensler and to ourselves, were we to imagine for a moment that her studies are ended. In the delivery of her voice and in finest phrasing she has much to learn. On the other hand, she has no mannerisms which it would be desirable to forget. What she does now is but a promise of what she will be able to do hereafter. At present, a quiet neatness of style, correct intonation, and a charmingly sweet voice are the characteristics of her singing. The compass of her voice we should take to be about two octaves and a note or two over, of good soprano quality. The lower notes are deficient in roundness and sonority; the upper ones clear and delicious. The register is smooth and well connected throughout. In personal appearance Miss Hensler is young and interesting. Her deportment on the stage might be materially improved without losing any of its attractive modesty. In a dramatic point of view Miss Hensler has everything to learn. To sum up, Miss Hensler has a delightful voice and some skill, but she needs more practice before she can do full justice either to the former or the latter. Her début was triumphantly successful—sufficient so, we hope, to secure her an engagement for next season. Three or four months hard work before a critical audience would do her immense service.

Vestvali, Brignoli and Bagiali were respectable in their several roles. In the second act Brignoli introduced a romance, by Meacodante, with much effect, which was encored. There are some things Brignoli can do better than any other tenor in America—this romance among the number.

Benefit of Max Maretzek.

The hero of nineteen opera campaigns, the defender of popular liberty against Austrian oppression, the savage annihilator of French fricasseistes, the arch enemy of candle manufacturers—in a word Max Maretzek, takes his benefit tonight at the Academy of Music. The Shade of Donizetti glows in its ceremonets. For the sake of that immortal composer, (and Max Maretzek, who bows down to him with an idolatrous love,) we hope there will be a good attendance.

The vicissitudes of Mr. Maretzek's career afford a striking illustration of the mutability of human riches, and the utter vanity of all earthly glory. Seven years ago he landed in America with nothing but talent and a wooden bâton. To-day he has nothing but talent and wooden bâton. In the interval he has made and lost several fortunes. We find him conducting the opera for Mr. Fox in 1849; commencing for himself in 1849; progressing rapidly to fortune in 1850; tumbling down suddenly in 1851, and from that time to the present making and losing money with strange rapidity and nonchalence. For seven years he has been the hard working propagandist of Italian Opera. He has done all the work; received all the kicks; made all the enemies; and conferred all the benefits of the lyric muse. In recom for this he is Musical Director of the Academy and has a benefit to-night. Rather hard is a worldly, but highly beautiful in a moral point of view.

It may not be inappropriate on this occasion, and certainly will not be uninteresting, to refer to some of the New-York campaigns of Mr. Maretzek. It will be seen that the artistes engaged by him were not of third or fourth rate class, and that really to Mr. Maretzek New-York is indebted for much of its best musical education.

In the Autumn of 1849, Maretzek gave a series of fifty performances at Astor-place, with Truffi Bettucca, Forti, Benedetti, Beneventano, and Novelli. It was carried through successfully. In 1850, he gave another series of fifty performances, with Parodi, as well as the other artistes. In the Spring of 1851, he commenced a season of sixty nights at Castle Garden, with Bosio, Truffi, Salvi, Bettini, Badiali, Marini, Beneventano, and Coletti. This great company performed at fifty cents admission only. The season and its promises were carried out fully, but in doing so Maretzek lost $30,000. The next year he tried another campaign in Astor-place, with Steffenone, Bosio, Bettini and most of the others. This was recuperative—so much so that a fresh season was commenced early in the Spring. But in the meantime an opposition sprang up at a rival house. The result was that both Companies were utterly ruined, after a brilliant but erratic career. Maretzek, with the remains of his Company and an orchestra consisting of three performers, (including musical director,) left for Mexico. After an absence of eight months, he returned and commenced another season at Castle Garden (1853,) with Sontag, Steffenone, Salvi, Pozzolini, Badiali, Beneventano, Marini and Rossi. This season was successfully carried out, and another undertaken at Niblo's, with Steffenone, Salvi and others. It was to have been fifty nights long, but terminated on the forty-ninth in consequence of a difficulty with Salvi. Our readers will remember the interesting and exceedingly abusive correspondence which took place at the time. Last year Max Maretzek went to Europe and returned with Beraldi, Graziani, Gozzo and others. These artistes performed thirty-six nights at Castle Garden. The season was unsuccessful, and terminated in vexatious losses to every one. Since this, the Academy has possessed Mr. Maretzek. In the course of these campaigns sixteen new operas have been introduced to the public, in addition to those of the customary repetoires and a number of revivals. Something worth remembering, surely.

It seems to us that in spite Ole Bull's silliness; Signora Vestvali's hatred, and Signor Mirate's supercilliousness, Max Maretzek has a legitimate claim on the musical public of New-York; more so than any fiddlers, singers, or Committees of Management who now reign or wish to reign omnipotently. For this reason we hope there will be a crowded attendance to-night.

The programme consists of the first three acts of "Masaniello" (with new accessory); an aria from "Don Sebastiano" (composed by Moro—who sings it,) and an act of "Linda" with Miss Hensler in the heroine.

Academy of Music.—"Masaniello," "Don Sebastiano," "Linda di Chamounix," for the benefit of Max Maretzek.

Niblo's Garden.—The Prima and Harrison troupe sing to night in Balfe's romantic opera, "The Daughter of St. Mark." This opera is new here, and has been prepared, we hear, with care. It will be played every night this week.

Wallack's Theatre.—A French Vaudeville Company gives a performance here to-night.

To-morrow the German Opera commences a Summer season with the "Fidio Ad Ringmann."

Burton's Theatre.—The Comedy of "Town and Country," and the farce, "The Widow's Victim" and "Out for a Holiday," are announced to-night for Mr. Eddy's benefit.

Barnum's Museum.—Afternoon and evening the usual drama in three acts called "Mediation."

Olympic Circus, No. 443 Bowery.—A new equestrienne, Mlle. Maria, makes her first appearance here to-night. The entertainments here are well conducted.

Negro Minstrelsy flourishes at Buckley's, Christy & Wood's, and Pelham's. A pleasant evening can be spent at either of these establishments.

LONG ISLAND.

LIQUOR.

Sunday in Brooklyn—Restaurants—Saloons—Public Entertainments.

The Brooklyn liquor dealers are mustering their forces, preparatory to defending themselves against the new indictments said to have been found against them by the two Grand Juries now in session in the City Hall, Brooklyn, and who will probably make returns thereof to the Court early the present week. As the crisis approaches, the liquor-dealers are all in a flutter to prepare for the emergency. The Kings County Association held a meeting yesterday afternoon, at Tryphoe's Hotel, Brooklyn, and "special meetings" are to be held every day during the week.

Last week an auxiliary Association was organized in the Eastern District, and the following officers were elected:

President—JEREMIAH C. THERY.
Vice President—WM. E. GARDNER.
Secretary—JOHN B. McCULLY.
Treasurer—D. BRAMEN.

This Society is to cooperate with the Kings County Society.

The liquor venders in the Sixteenth Ward think the parent Society move too slow for their purposes, and accordingly last week the Germans commenced the organization of a semi-military Society to resist by force the execution of the Prohibitory Liquor law. They adjourned to yesterday (Sunday) afternoon to complete their organization. In this interval they received quite a shock—one of their principal men, JOHN STATEN, keeper of a saloon on Gould street, blew out his own brains, and another, named CHAS. PALENBERG, drank himself to death. Before they had recovered from the effect of these disasters, Mayor HALL threw a bomb into their camp—the contents of which run thus:

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, I have ascertained that certain persons, pretending to be citizens of Brooklyn, have assembled in the Seventh District of the city, and have constituted themselves into an association professing for its object a flagrant violation of the laws of this State, and have given notice of their intention to renounce on Sunday next, for the purpose of furthering their illegal designs. AND, whereas, it is made my duty to see that the laws of this State are duly observed within the city of Brooklyn, and the aforesaid association meeting for the purpose aforesaid is a violation of the laws of this State at any time, but more especially on Sunday, and will be deemed to be an indictable offence, punishable with fine and imprisonment.

Now I hereby give notice that I shall cause all persons to be arrested who may be assembled for the purpose of committing any act injurious to public morals, or for the preventing any act injurious to public morals, or for the obstruction of the laws of this State, to the end that they may be prosecuted against according to law, and all and every policeman in the city of Brooklyn, who may have actual knowledge of such unlawful combination, are hereby directed forthwith to arrest such offenders or offenders. It is my intention that the majesty of the law shall be maintained at all hazards.

Given under my hand and seal of office, at the Mayor's office, this 16th day of June, 1855.

GEO. HALL, Mayor.

The above was on Saturday afternoon posted throughout the Sixteenth Ward, and it was amusing to see the consternation depicted on the countenances of the Germans, as they assembled in groups at different places, when the proclamation was translated to them.

The usual action on the part of the Mayor prevented the public meeting from being held. He visited Military Hall, Ewen-street, where the meeting was to have been held yesterday afternoon, accompanied by the Chief of Police, and they were prepared for any emergency; but their appearance on the ground was all-sufficient.

☞ A public meeting will be held at the Brooklyn Athenæum, this evening, to raise funds towards the erection of a monument on Fort Greene to the memory of the Martyrs who perished in the prison ships at Wallabout Bay.

GOURAUD'S LIBRARY OF ROMANCE.
JUST ISSUED.
THE WHITE HIGHWAYMAN, 12MO. XIII.

His fetlocks clog—so young story quickly laid
Upon the sods, and that rang the bell,
Which called to his assistance Julia maid;
And soon of sals and feathers burnt, the smell
Brought back her breath and reason. "I'm afraid,"
The maid said, "that my mistress is not well!
Oh dear me, what a shocking fury face she has!"
Story replied, shaking—"Very facies!"

How shocking red, dark, tanned, freckled, pimpled, sallow or rough face appears to a lady, and how strange it is ladies will submit to these evils when they know that GOURAUD'S ITALIAN MEDICATED SOAP is a certain cure for these evils, it is also known that GOURAUD'S FOUDRES SUBVILES will positively extirpate superfluous human hair. GOURAUD'S GRECIAN DYE is celebrated for its properties in converting red, light or gray hair to a brilliant black. GOURAUD'S LILY WHITE is a delicate cosmetic for instantaneously eliciting a delicate whiteness to the skin, far superior to the powders in use.

Dr. FELIX GOURAUD'S renowned preparations can be obtained genuine at his Cosmetic Depot, No. 67 Walker-st., five stores from Broadway, out of Wm. HAYES' Bookstore.

DU YOU WANT LUXURIANT WHISKERS?—DONOUGHUE'S CELEBRATED BALM will get them in six weeks. It is my ONGUENT from one of the first German chemists. I spent one year in traveling over the country, testing its powers; and from my own experience, and from the affidavits of those who have used it, I can positively affirm that it will "make the beard or whiskers to grow on the smoothest face in six weeks, and without stain or injury to the skin; and no man can possibly be ill with it, as it is entirely vegetable." Price $1 a bottle; large bottle, containing eight of the small, $3. It is easily applied and not more than one bottle is required. C. G. GRAHAM, No. 308 Broadway; HAYES, No. 118 Nassau-st., Brooklyn; SIEBERT, No. 44 South st., Albany; Dr. SHIPMAN, No. 57 State-st., Albany; SPALDING, No. 97 Tremont row, Boston; COLLINS, No. 160 Main-st., Buffalo, and all druggists.

The house is handsomely furnished, and has all the modern improvements. The situation is delightful. Call at No. 403, Fourth-st., South Brooklyn, between Nevin and Hoyt sts.

BOARD WANTED IN BROOKLYN.—A gentleman and wife, of quiet, retired habits, are desirous of meeting with pleasant unfurnished rooms, in a strictly private family. Locality must be near Wall-st Ferry. Southern locality would not suit. Address F. W., Box No. 1,077 New-York Post-office, stating terms, &c.

BOARD—PAINTING—MUSIC.—A painter, who also plays piano and violin, wants to find a respectable family where his services (both music in playing and music) would be considered as an equivalent for board. The advertiser knows him as a young gentleman, who can procure the best of references, and who will do everything to make himself useful and agreeable. VANDER WEYDE,
New-York University, first floor, No. 16.

A WIDOW LADY—Residing in a pleasant part of Brooklyn, within ten minutes' walk of South Ferry, and one minute's walk of the Greenwood cars, is desirous of obtaining two or three gentlemen to board with her. Every attention will be paid to their comfort. Apply at No. 4 Butler-st., South Brooklyn.

PRIVATE BOARDING.—One or two gentlemen can be accommodated with a furnished room, with board, in a private family residing at 305 4th-st., opposite Calvary Church. The house is finely located, and has all the modern improvements. References exchanged.

COUNTRY BOARD WANTED.—For a small family, within an hour's ride of the City. The vicinity of Astoria or Havemeyer preferred. Address J. N., Times office.

COUNTRY BOARDING.—A few persons can be accommodated with good board in a pleasant and healthy village, 4 hours ride from New-York. For particulars, apply at No. 29 Fulton-st., N. Y.

COUNTRY BOARDING.—In a pleasant village on the Sound, forty miles from the City. A desirable place for a respectable family, with children for horses if wanted. Inquire of JOSEPH WOOD, No. 25 Pine-st.

FOUR BRILLIANT NEW NOVELS
FOR SUMMER READING.
NOW READY.
FROM THE PENS OF
THACKERAY, MRS. SHIELDS,
AND FOR SALE BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

I.
PEG WOFFINGTON.
BY CHARLES READE.
1 volume, 12mo, 75 cents.

II.
CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.
BY CHARLES READE.
1 volume, 12mo, 75 cents.

III.
A SCHOOL OF LIFE.
BY ANNA MARY HOWITT.
1 vol. 12mo, 75 cents.

IV.
AMYAS LEIGH.
BY CHARLES KINGSLEY.
1 vol. 12mo. $1 25.

From the Boston Transcript.

"Christie Johnstone" has been stereotyped through six editions in London, and "Peg Woffington" is going likewise at fast to press and the English reading public will rank along with it. It is of no sort of consequence what the critics say, the people will read it, and the critics may lay his nostrum, and how he may attack his characters he knows will grapple to the reader with hooks of steel. Brilliant and interesting, full of exciting incidents and "Christie" so charmed in the perusal by many even, that a whole unwilled leaf could not be found in the book. It will be curious to watch the author's career in fame and fortune, for both are before him; and to those who pay well for the best of reading, we will do everything to make himself useful and agreeable. VANDER WEYDE,
New-York University, first floor, No. 16.

From the Daily Advertiser.

A book announced from any of the Hoveys is generally all that is required to one up a first edition. In all strength, we have received from the publisher Miss Howitt's "Amyas Leigh" in two vols. 12mo. Price $1 25. Of this "School of Life," Boston being most conservative and entire so, it is interesting with a generous amount of good sense, and well calculated in the way to interest and guide the million. It will have a great sale.

From the Hartford Courant.

"Amyas Leigh" is one of the most powerfully written novels of the present day, and one which will make a powerful sensation in the world of letters. It is a tale from the adventurous history of one of the sea captains of Queen Elizabeth's reign, and his explorations in America and hostility to the Spaniards. The whole plot, arrangement of the incidents, and development of the story are highly artistic. It will rank with the already wide-spread fame of the author of "Hypatia."

ADDITIONAL NOTICES FROM THE PRESS NORTH, SOUTH, EAST AND WEST.
Are presenting daily and unmistakable evidence of the kind and cordial reception everywhere given to
HENRY WARD BEECHER'S NEW BOOK,
STAR PAPERS;
OR,
EXPERIENCES OF NATURE AND ART.

Several columns of the Times might be filled with choice extracts from critical reviews of this remarkable book, but a few will suffice of the many received.

BY THE LAST MAIL.

From the Hartford Republican.

This volume contains some of the choicest writing in the English language. The chief merit consists in its exceeding naturalness and depth of real sentiment. There is no affectation, but deep-felt heartiness of soul in every line. What a contrast to the common-place, and a delightful consummation for the brooks and mountain sides.

From the Cleveland Morning Leader.

These papers are overflowing with a grace and beauty peculiarly their own. They are so unfeignedly the utterings of a true child of Nature and Art, and so blended into the art of genius; fine taste and exquisite sensibility in the beauties of nature and art shine out everywhere from these brilliant papers.

From the New-York Life Illustrated.

Irving himself does not write more delightfully of natural beauty than the author of this elegant volume. The lovers of rural scenes and rural pleasures will find in it just the essays they can most heartily appreciate; essays, the perusal of which will be a pleasure, which, when once commenced in a book, form a supplement to a town.

From the Daily Ohio State Journal.

The book has the sparkle of the author's genius and is destined to a wide circulation.

From the Lexington Republican.

You seem to be standing amid the many scenes he writes of, so fraught for the moment the author's ideal by and imagine yourself giving vent to your own feelings in the language you are reading.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BLANCHE DEARWOOD!
THE NEW NOVELETTE OF
AMERICAN LIFE.
Is every where commended and
Receives the applause of Readers and Critics.
EXTRACTS FROM SOME NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

From the New-York Daily Times.

The best American novel of the season so far as we have yet seen.

From the Boston Advertiser.

The principal characters in the book are drawn with a good deal of power. It is well written, and the plot quite skillfully contrived.

From the Philadelphia Pennsylvanian.

It displays remarkable ability.

From the New-York Herald.

There is simplicity, truthfulness, and vigor of thought in this charming tale, which entitles it to rank with the good popular stories of Miss Austen. There are few modern tales, the perusal of which has given us more pleasure.

From the Boston Atlas.

We predict for Blanche Dearwood a popularity and success of no ordinary character, if the reading public share with us our impression of its attraction.

From the Hartford Courant.

It is spirited, and the spirit of the narrative kept up to the close.

From the Albany Spectator.

The scene is laid on the banks of the Hudson, and it seems like coming back to the days when Irving immortalized many a spot on our fable river.

From the Commercial Advertiser.

Blanche Dearwood is an original story of uncommon merit. A more attractive and entertaining work has not been copyrighted here for years.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

The opening scenes are laid among the romantic Highlands of the Hudson, and the word-painting of that fine, old place, the "Cove," with which the first chapter commences is quite felicitous.

From the Sunday Mercury.

No person can proceed far in the book before he arrives at the pleasant conviction that the writer has been emulated to his task by the desire of achieving a lovely ideality in his chief female character.

From the Philadelphia Saturday Post.

A singular book, written with a power not often equaled. The plot—though a remarkable one—is not unnatural, the incidents being combined artistically, and a sense of harmony and fitness pervading the whole.

From the New-York Express.

Whether we may regard it as a delicious love-story, (and we unhesitatingly recommend it to "all true lovers,") or as a well-built intrigue skillfully managed with a view of intensity of interest, happy conclusion, pleasant description and incident, or any of the usual excellences of a work of fiction, we are prepared to accord to it our vote and commendation—as the best new novel before the public, and as likely to continue so for a long season. It will have a splendid run here, and will undoubtedly be reprinted and read in England. 12mo. Cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

MARKET REPORTS.

[illegible]

Liverpool, June 16—2 P. M.

ASHES—Are quoted this day, 30s 6d, showing a decline of 6d since the last report. The transactions yesterday were limited to 200 bbls. Pearls and 100 bbls. Pots, at the quotations.

BREADSTUFFS—Flour continues to be very extensive supply and very low prices, with a very dull market for all descriptions. The sales of Western Canal, Ohio and Michigan, for the week, have been 20,000 bbls. Pearls and 500 bbls. Pots, at [illegible]

FLOUR AND MEAL—Sour and Western brands, of [illegible] quality, meet moderate supply and fully [illegible] at [illegible] prices, but some lots of Ohio, which are more abundant and severely [illegible] have experienced and are still [illegible] the quotations range:

[illegible]	$8 87½@ 9 00
[illegible]	9 00 @ 9 12½
[illegible]	9 12½@ 9 37½
[illegible]	9 37½@ 9 50
Common to good Indiana and Michigan	9 62½@ 9 87½
Fancy Michigan	9 87½@10 12½
Fancy Ohio	9 87½@10 12½
Extra Indiana and Michigan	10 37½@12 00
[illegible]	11 00 @12 75

GRAIN—Wheat is less freely offered at prices above the views of buyers. Hence, the insignificant business. Rye is quoted at $1 70@$1 80 ⅌ bushel, with nothing of moment doing. Corn and Western Oats have again declined, and may not now command more than from 54c. down. Corn is very active, but very dearly [illegible]. There is not much for the market while the home and export demand is moderate. Canada [illegible] Mixed, the higher rate for a lot to arrive on Monday. Other kinds remain as last noticed.

HAY—There were 500 bales River bought at $1c @1 02½, ⅌ 100 lbs.

HIDES—Mr. HULL informs us that the demand for hides has been quite active during the week, and sales have been large for the season, about equal the receipts. Advices have arrived forward, and the principal part of this description has been sold at a decline of 1c. ⅌ lb. from the rates of last week. The receipts reported from the Canada, which was expected here, arrived in Monday last, with 6,000 Hides. Receipts have been 35,237 Hides, as follows: 2,425 Maranham and Minos, ex Caliphal; 10,000 Rio Grande, ex Ottome, and 2,200 same class and from the West Indies. The sales of the week have been: 8,500 dry Buenos Ayres, 21@22 lbs., at 8c, 6 months, usual selection; 2,000 dry Orinoco, 22 lbs., at 10c, 6 months, usual selection; 1,600 dry California, 65 lbs., at 17c, 6 months, usual selection; 1,000 dry same Maranham, 24½ lbs., at 15c, 6 months, usual selection; 1,000 dry Porto Cabello, 22½ lbs., at 15c, 6 months, usual selection; 1,000 dry Porto Cabello, 22½ lbs., at 15c, 6 months, rejecting water damaged; 2,200 dry Barcelona, 22 lbs., at 15c, 6 months, rejecting water damaged, (to ship;) 1,000 dry Maranham, 22 lbs., at 15c, 6 months, rejecting water damaged; 250 dry California, 25 lbs., at 15c, 6 months, selected; 1,200 green salted California Kips, 20 lbs., at 8½c, 6 months, selected; 500 dry Southern, 16@18 lbs., at 16c @15½c, cash, as they run; 1,000 dry salted Matamoras, 30 lbs., at 15c, 6 months, without 2 Hides. The stock on hand of Ox and Cow Hides is 65,000 as follows: 4,000 dry Buenos Ayres; 10,700 dry Rio Grande; 9,500 dry Orinoco; 3,000 dry Porto Cabello and Barcelona; 5,000 dry Maranham, &c.; 400 dry Caracas; 300 dry Savanilla; ——dry Maranham; 700 dry San Juan; ——dry Maranham; 1,500 dry Chagres; 4,000 dry Southern and Texas; 2,000 dry West India; ——dry California; 600 salted Buenos Ayres. Expected to arrive shortly at this port: 12,000 dry Rio Grande; 9,500 dry Orinoco; 3,000 dry Porto Cabello and Barcelona; 5,000 dry Maranham, &c.; 400 dry Caracas; 300 dry Savanilla; ——dry Maranham; 700 dry San Juan; ——dry California; 600 salted Buenos Ayres. Expected to arrive shortly at this port: 12,000 dry Rio Grande; 9,500 dry Orinoco; 3,000 dry Porto Cabello and Barcelona; 5,000 dry Maranham, &c.; 400 dry Caracas; 300 dry Savanilla; ——dry Maranham; 700 dry San Juan; ——dry California; 600 salted Buenos Ayres. Stock of Calf Skins, 30,000 pieces. Sales of Calf Skins last year's crop have been made at 10c @ 9 ⅌.

SHOT—Sixteen Pig is in fair demand and is very firm, the day's sales including 200 tons at $20@$29, cash, and $20 six months, 9 ⅌. Other kinds are selling a little more attention, but are unchanged in value.

LAYING—Eastern are very rare and are much wanted, and are quoted [illegible]

LEAD—Is active, yet steady, as previously reported. [illegible] Mr. HULL says that "holders have no point in view to realize, and prices of Hemlock Sole may be quoted 15@16c ⅌ lb. lower, at which [illegible] have a fair demand for all descriptions. [illegible] Upper, in [illegible] and [illegible] full price. The demand for [illegible] to last evening amount to 22,000 sides Hemlock and 7,000 do. Oak. Receipts 55,000 sides Hemlock and 1,000 Oak, leaving a stock: of 76,000 of the former and 30,000 of the latter." We quote: Oak Slaughter and Saddle—Good Light, 25c@26c. Good Middle, 25c. [illegible] Good Heavy, 23c @26c. Oak Slaughter Sole—Good All Weights, 23c@26c. Hemlock, Buenos Ayres, &c.—Good Light, 20c @21c. Good Middle, 21c. [illegible] Good Heavy, 19½c.@21c. Hemlock, Orinoco, &c.—Good Light, 16c @19c. Good Middle, 19c. [illegible] Good Heavy, 17c.@18½c. Hemlock, Orinoco and Buenos Ayres, damaged, all weights, 16c.@19c.; do., poor, all weights, 15c.@18½c. Hemlock Slaughter, in rough, 35c. @38c. On six months' credit.

LIME—Rockland is suitable and firm, at 90c. for Common and $1 12½ for Lump, ⅌ bbl.

MOLASSES—The market is very poorly supplied, and is quiet but steady.

NAVAL STORES—There is not much doing in this line, and prices of all articles remain about the same.

OILS—The market for all descriptions is essentially unaltered.

PROVISIONS—Pork is still in good demand, and is on the advance. 1,300 bbls. have been sold at $17 50 for Old Mess, $15 for New Prime, and $18@18½ for New Mess, ⅌ bbl. Cut Meats are salable and firm and have changed hands at 9@c.@10c. for Hams, and 7½@7½c. for Shoulders, ⅌ lb. Bacon is in moderate supply and demand; 75 boxes Rencloss Middles brought 10c. ⅌ lb. Lard is actively sought after at unaltered figures, [illegible] Beef is still favorably [illegible] Prime, here and to arrive—chiefly here, at [illegible] ⅌ bbl. Beef still favors Tierces—there have been 300 bbls. disposed of during the day at $9@$10 for Prime, $10 50@$12 50 for Country Mess, $15 @$16 for repacked Mess, and $16 50@$17 for extra do. ⅌ bbl. Prime Mess Beef is moderately inquired for, within a range of from $22@$23 ⅌ tce. Beef Hams have sold to-day at from $16@$20 ⅌ bbl. Butter is steady at 14c.@16c. for Ohio, 17c.@22c. for ordinary to good State, and 22c.@27c. for choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is worth but from 8c.@10c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—Is in small stock and moderate demand, at [illegible] 100 lbs.

SALT—The inquiry is improving, and prices exhibit more firmness and buoyancy.

SEEDS—Mr. HULL sums up this week's business thus: "Coat—The market is firm, and I notice sales of 30 bales Curacao at 52c. 6 months. 70 bales Turkoman are the only receipt of Shine, and the only lot of heavy Teneriffe in market. Dust—The stock of Domestic Wool is growing large and accumulating—and in view of the rise of the Arkansas and Red Rivers, large receipts may shortly be expected from that section. Prime parcels sell readily at present rates, but inferior kinds are dull. Sales have been to a fair extent, principally to factory. 7 bales San Juan (washed) brought 41c. ⅌ lb., cash. Indiana at 35@40c.; 3,000 lbs. Arkansas at 19c.; 3,000 lbs. Texas (tare-free) 16c.@16½c.; 1,900 lbs. Florida at 22c.@23c.; 3,000 lbs. Illinois at 24c. cash.

SPICES—The market is pretty brisk and the tendency of prices is upward. We now quote: Cassia, in mats, ⅌ lb. [illegible] some owners asking even 45c.; Ginger, Race, in 60lb. [illegible] Mace, 85c.@90c.; Nutmegs, No. 1, [illegible]; Pepper, Sumatra, 11c.; Pimento, Jamaica, (cash) 12c.; Cloves, (cash) 16c.@14c.

SUGARS—Continue in good request at full quotations, with sales for the day of 500 hhds. Cuba Muscovado, [illegible] 146 Tierces and 50 hhds. Cuba Muscovado at 10c.@10c.; 146 Tierces at 9½c.@9½c.; and 60 New-Orleans at 9½c.@9c. ⅌ lb.

TALLOW—There were 10,000 lbs. prime sold at 12c. ⅌ lb.

TEA—Is in rather better demand, but is without any material change in price.

WHALE—Sales of 250 bbls. Ohio and Prison were reported at the [illegible] ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—We have no particularly new features to report. [illegible] have been pretty well sustained. [illegible] Cotton, in bulk and bags, [illegible] ⅌ bushel. For London and Liverpool, the shipments were of a trivial nature, at old figures. For Bremen, there were engaged, a small [illegible] of Ashes at the 64; 30 bales Hops at 5c. ⅌ lb.; 20 tons [illegible] at 12c. 6d.; 1,100 bbls. Rosin at 1s.; and 100 bbls. Spirits Turpentine at 2c. ⅌ gallon. For other ports, there was little offering, and rates were essentially the same. The latest charters were: Brig Ann, for Matanzas, (tons to Philadelphia,) [illegible]; Brig Ellen, for Matanzas, [illegible]; Brig Ann, for the Continent, [illegible]; Brig Hayes, for Hamburg, [illegible]; a bark, name [illegible], 24 tons; a ship, 800 tons, to Mobileras, $18,000; a [illegible] to the Cape of Good Hope, $14,000—and a bark from Calcutta to New-York, carrying over 512 ⅌ ton; a Norwegian bark at Boston, Rice Shellac to New-Orleans, $1 75; a bark, 372 tons, to Cadiz, $4,000; a brig to Rio and back, Coffee, $1 ⅌ bag—or if to New-Orleans, $1 10; a bark from Jacksonville to Rio, Lumber, $10; a brig from Machias to Rio, 1[illegible]

SUMMER RETREATS.

ORIENT POINT HOUSE, LONG ISLAND.—The above house having been very much enlarged and improved will be ready for the public to be opened for the reception of visitors on the 1st day of July next.

During the past season the subscriber has given his personal attention to a thorough and entire improvement of the premises, and takes pleasure in saying to his friends and the public that he believes his house will not be excelled by any upon the seaboard. A large and commodious wharf now obviates the former necessity of landing by small boats. The steamer CRICKET, plying between Hartford and Fog Harbor, furnishes an excellent communication between the Point and all the landings upon Connecticut River. The new and commodious steamer ISLAND BELLE leaves Catherine Market-slip, New-York, for the Point every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 11 o'clock A. M., or living at the Point, about dusk. Returning upon alternate days. SAM F. JONES, Proprietor.

OCEANIC HOUSE, CONEY ISLAND, IS NOW OPEN.—BOARD REDUCED.—The advantages of sea-bathing on the finest beach in the United States, it being within sight of the Visitor, Gravesville and National Race Courses. The delightful drives in the vicinity are unsurpassed; its easy access to the City of New-York—stages leaving Fulton Ferry, Brooklyn, hourly; the beauty of its location, commanding a fine view of Staten Island, the Bay, the Highlands of Neversink and the surrounding country, render it a most pleasant and delightful retreat. The accommodations of the hotel are unsurpassed, and the table furnished with the best the market affords. ALBERT ROGERS, Agent.

CATSKILL MOUNTAIN HOUSE.—This house is now open for the reception of visitors. The usual regular line of stages has been established between the landing and the house, running in connection with the Hudson River Railroad and the day boats. The authorized agent of the proprietors will be found at the landing and the depot of the Hudson River Railroad, Oak Hill Station, opposite Catskill. Passengers will save themselves expense and trouble by giving their checks to him. BEACH & CO.

JUNE 11, 1855.

MOHEGAN LAKE.—Four miles from Peekskill Rail Road Station, and within two hours' travel of the City. A large family, or four or five adults, may obtain fireside boarding accommodations in a retired residence near this beautiful lake. Fresh fish, shady groves, boats for sale and aquatic amusements. Apply to JOHN MEAD, Meadow-bank, near the lake, or Mr. THOS. JONES, No. 247 Broadway, New York, will answer inquiries as to locality, terms, &c.

NATIONAL HOTEL, REPUBLICAN SULPHUR SPRINGS, Otsego County, N. Y.—This hotel is now open for the season. It has just been newly fitted up, and offers peculiar advantages to families anxious to escape the fever and watering places. The Springs have a high reputation in many diseases, and are situated in the midst of a beautiful rural district, near the line of the New-York Central Railroad. Passengers will leave the cars at Herkimer, where they will find conveyances for the Springs. E. CAREY, Jr., Proprietor.

CONGRESS HALL, PATERSON, N. J.—is now open for the reception of Summer boarders. The above Hotel is pleasantly located in the most convenient part of Paterson, being but five minutes' walk from the Falls and Railroad Depot. Gentlemen wishing rooms for their families during the Summer months will be accommodated on very reasonable terms. S. W. LUSE.

TRENTON FALLS, NEAR UTICA, N. Y.—The Hotel at this place, of favorite resort in spite for the season. Visitors can now reach it direct by the Black River and Utica Railroad, trains leaving Utica on the arrival of the steamboat, express train, also of the Hudson River express train. M. MOORE, Proprietor.

UNITED STATES RAILROAD CAR-BRAKE COMPANY.—No. 63 Beaver-st., New-York.—President, GOUVERNEUR MORRIS; Secretary and Treasurer, NORMAN E. WASHBURN; General Agent, WILLIAM G. CREAMER. Directors—GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, HENRY SHELDEN, JOHN M. HOPKINS, WILLIAM NORRIS, WILLIAM G. CREAMER.

We now offer to Railroad Companies the cheapest, simplest and most efficient method of enabling the employee of a locomotive to apply the engine brakes of a train of cars, that has ever been made. We have in our office a full sized model, showing the operation of this invention perfectly, to which we ask the attention of all persons interested in Railroads. It is needless to describe the advantages of applying the engineer the means to apply the brakes; suffice it to say there is hardly a railroad accident occurs but that the adoption and proper understanding of this invention would totally prevent or greatly mitigate it. Immediate adoption is demanded as well by the interests of the company as the safety of persons and property intrusted to Railroads. We offer every facility to Companies desirous of testing, for themselves, the advantages of this method. For circulars and other information apply at the office of the Company. W. G. CREAMER, General Agent.

MEDICAL.

RHEUMATIC FEVER AND AGUE CURE—NATURE'S INFALLIBLE SPECIFIC—For the speedy, safe and Cure of Intermittent and Remittent Fevers, Fever and Ague Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, General Debility, Night Sweats, and all other forms of Disease which have their origin in MALARIA or MIASMA. This public announcement is made at certain seasons in unavoidably limited, at every season, is the same, and cannot be, whatever is subject, South, East or West, and will everywhere yield to this newly discovered medicine, which is claimed to be the GREATEST DISCOVERY IN MEDICINE EVER MADE.

The specific is so harmless that it may be taken by persons of every age, sex or condition, and it will not substitute for the treatment by Quinine, Mercury, Arsenic, and other poisonous or deleterious drugs, not a particle of any of which is admitted into this preparation.

The proprietor distinctly claims these extraordinary results from the use of this NATURAL ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

It will entirely protect any resident or traveler even in the most sickly or swampy localities, from any Ague, or Bilious Fever, or Fever and Ague, or any injury from constantly inhaling Malaria or Miasma.

It will instantly check the Ague in persons who have suffered for any length of time, from one day to twenty years, so that they need never have another chill, by continuing to use according to directions.

It will immediately relieve all distressing results of Malaria or Ague disease, such as general debility, night sweats, &c. The patient at once begins to recover appetite and strength, and continues until a permanent and radical cure is effected.

Finally, its use will banish Fever and Ague from families, and all diseases. Farmers and all laboring men by adopting it as a preventive, will be free from Ague or Bilious attacks in that season of the year which, while it is the most sickly, is the most valuable one to them.

One or two bottles will answer for ordinary cases, some may require more.

Directions are printed in German, French and Spanish, accompany each bottle.

Price One Dollar. Liberal discounts made to the trade.

One of the many testimonials received almost daily in favor of RHODES' FEVER AND AGUE CURE, which has never failed:

LEWISBURG, Union Co., Pa., May 3, 1855.

MR. J. A. RHODES—Dear Sir: The box of medicine you sent me came duly to hand on the 15th of April, and I hand you herewith receipt for the same.

I have sold about one-half of it, and so far the people who have used it are satisfied that it has cured them. It has certainly stopped the Ague in every one who has tried it, and six of the cases were of long standing. My sister, who has had it for five or six years back, and could never get it stopped, except by quinine, and that only as long as she would take it, is now, I think, entirely cured by your remedy.

If it thus continues to keep off the Ague, as I think it will, you may expect from me large orders.

I am, Sir, yours very truly, C. R. McGINLEY.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Mr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases of confirmed consumption. He has made the possession over 300 certificates of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of scrofulous.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ring-worm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

For a purifier of the blood, Mr. Kennedy's medicine is a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. Be sure to write will cure your humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet we have had a sure remedy for humor, discovered it in 1848; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1854, I sold about twelve bottles per day. In April, 1855, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet over accompany—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one bottle morning and evening; children of ten years, from one to two; from 5 to 9 years, ten spoonfuls. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren-st., Roxbury, Mass. Price, $1.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION, by Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, (Professor of Diseases of Women, &c.) Price $1, (200,000.) Illus., pp. 250. On fine paper, extra binding, $1. Every complaint to which woman is subject, from girlhood to womanhood, as also as wife and as mother, are fully described with the causes, the symptoms, and also proper modes of treatment, in a plain, simple, and chaste language, easily understood, and then every woman can discover, by comparing her own symptoms with those described, the nature, character, and causes of her complaint; and be spared much anxiety and suffering. The work about becoming a mother has a variety of instruction and advice of the utmost importance to her future health, in respect to which her anxiety can be fully consulting a medical gentleman, will find such instruction and advice, and also explains many symptoms which otherwise would occasion anxiety or alarm. How many cases of Miscarriage, Barrenness, Irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine the health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which the delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb,) or from other other troublesome, debilitating, but in the usual sense not in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult, if not dangerous deliveries, and slow and uncertain recoveries! Some, whose lives are thrown away in the prime of life, which a little care, the means of prevention, amelioration and relief. How many bitter moments, how much anguish, might have been spared to the sufferer, to her husband, to her relatives, by a timely possession of this little volume! It is impracticable to convey the vast amount of information in this work, which is intended for the sufferer strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage.

EXTRA.—LADIES READ THIS!—The Spanish Regulating Pill—being a safe, never-failing, invaluable remedy for special irregularities, and other diseases to which females are so frequently liable from exposure and neglect—is justly deserving public attention. After years of experiment, labor and cost, the great remedy, thoroughly tested in hundreds of cases, needs no other recommendation but its own specific virtues. The pills can only be procured of Mrs. CROCKER, No. 280 Hous-on-st.

WILKIN'S AMULET.—This most extraordinary chemical combination for restoring and preserving the hair is the most perfect luxuriance and color was originally compounded by the celebrated oculist, Dr SAMUEL M. ELLIOTT, of New-York, and has for the last ten years been gratuitously distributed by him to his friends. Dr. ELLIOTT, urged by many to allow this most valuable cure for baldness to be brought before the public, has now kindly and gratuitously presented the undersigned, with the recipe for that purpose, as will be seen from Dr. ELLIOTT's certificate published below. The Amulet is also highly recommended for general use as a most exhilarating and pleasant wash for the head, keeping it entirely free of dandruff. Price 25½ cents per bottle. Sold at the principal drug stores, and by

M. WILKIN, No. 44 Maiden-lane, New-York.

NEW-YORK, June 4, 1855.

This is to certify that I have given to Mr. WILKIN the prescription for restoring and improving the hair, and known as the Amulet, which I invented, and for which I make no charge, but give it gratuitously.

DR. HUNTER'S RED DROP

NEW-YORK CITY.

Only Mystery.

When the news came that the Colonel went on the steamer Pocahontas, (Capt. Mosher,) at 7 P. M., of Saturday of June, for Central America. The following is given as the list of the passengers on board of the Steamer:

Col. H. L. Kinney, J. E. Swift, Simon Pimentel, W. R. Tunno, Simon W. Lee, W. L. Lewis, E. W. Hewitt, Jos. Pentenrieder, D. H. Trenlor, M. Schryver, M. Ballard, W. Whitmore, M. Westbrook, Geo. Washington.

Now the hour named was the very one when the 3,000 indignant carpenters and others met at the dock of Eighth-street, resolved substantially that the blockade was a humbug, and that it was too bad that to teasing the Colonel who didn't dream of blockadering, to yet Capt. Graham to such inconvenience, and so to annoy the stewardesses,—impudently called "colored." The Colonel—if he should be in the Kinney—believed in the old style of blockading. To cure a congestion in one part he chose a blister on a distant part—to relieve the excitement about his own immediate vicinity, he gets up a false meeting about the steamer that was supposed to be in his employ. Good practice and it cures the patient. This arrangement brings the Colonel out in time to meet President Walker half way across the narrow neck of land between the oceans. The Dunskye may as well get ready for prophecy.

The Snuff-box Man.

The New-York correspondent of the Albany Atlas says that his snuff-box was cost by the Emperor of Russia, Mr. Louis A. Depau. He is a relative of Colonel Thorn of this City, and the husband of his wife's sister is the Baron de Gerard, ex-Sr. Pierre, Equerry to the Emperor, whose wife was one of the Empress Eugenie's first maids of honor. Mr. Depau took his yacht, the Sylvie, over to Europe a year ago, and unsuccessfully contended for a prize in the British regatta. Mr. Depau will take legal means to recover his valuable present, which was intercepted. He resides in New-Rochelle." Now it remains to be settled who the Jew was that Mr. D—— allowed to diddle our respectable citizens out of an $800 bid for a fancy box supposed to be of Imperial origin. And then we'd like to know whether the foreign Jew gives a handsome commission to his countrymen; if so, several who are owing little debts would consent to pay them in that way.

Renewed Violation of the Neutrality Laws.

It was reported at the Office of the United States Marshal on Saturday, that a revenue cutter had surprised a British brig outside the harbor, which, in addition to her officers and crew, had some twenty recruits on board for the British service in the Crimea. No arrests appear to have been made by the Police authorities of these recruits, nor were they given into the custody of the United States Marshal, so far as we could ascertain. The report may have been a week invention of "some Russian agent," which is said to be quite a lucky conjuration in these days.

Fatal Accident.

As the up-town Harlem cars were on their way up Centre-street on Saturday evening, two men, named John McNally and John McMullen, were crushed by them. The Coroner was to have held an inquest yesterday, but witnesses could not be found to investigate the case. The inquest will be held to-day. From what we could learn it appears that the men were intoxicated at the time, and that they were halfway between the cars when they lost their balance, or were knocked under the wheels by the pedestal. At the point where the men were killed, a lot of rubbish was within two feet two inches of the track, and the platform extends four-teen inches over the track. The probability is that they were knocked under the wheels by the platform. Those who were on the platform at the time say that the driver should be exonerated entirely from blame. But there is blame somewhere. Is it probably impenetrable in the Street Contractor to throw a pile of bricks to be built up so near to the track of a railroad car?

City Mortality.

The mortality in our City continues to decrease. The official returns of the City Inspector report 356 deaths here last week, which is a diminution of 2 as compared with the returns of the previous week, and of 76 compared with the corresponding week of the past year. Of the whole number 56 were men, 51 women, 126 boys, and 120 girls. Principal causes:—consumption, 36, convulsions 34, dropsy 22, diarrhœa 7, dysentery 3, fever 26, inflammation 27, marasmus 17, measles 2, old age 3, and palsy 5. Thirteen deaths resulted from violent causes. Nativities:—United States, 226; Ireland, 50; Germany, 25; England, 6; Italy, 1; and the remainder of different European nativities. Forty were inmates of the various public institutions.

The African Slave Trade.

The examination before Commissioner Betts in the case of Rudolf C. Lasalle, Capt. Martin and Theodore F. Myers, charged with fitting out from New-York in November, 1854, as a slaver, the bark Hermia, was to have been resumed last Saturday, at 12 M. Mr. McKeon, United States District Attorney, announced the confinement at Baltimore (from severe indisposition) of Captain McGuire, the material witness in the case, and the only witness remaining to be examined. The case was therefore adjourned to next Saturday.

Wanted, a Writing-Master.

We saw a doctor's prescription yesterday, so admirably written, so elegantly penned, that it seemed impossible to spell out a single word of it. It might have been a receipt in full for a stamping big bill, an order to give the bearer a merciless thrashing, or the equivalent for a dose of salts, for anything that a common reader could have made of it. The druggist, however, to whom it was carried said it was all right. We asked what it spelled. He said he didn't know, but that always when he saw that convert at the bottom he knew it came from Dr. ——, who never prescribed anything but calomel and jalap—tea and tar. It was all right, he was sure.

Mackerel.

It seems that salt mackerel are not going to be quite as plenty and cheap in the market as was supposed earlier in the season. The Newburyport Herald says: "We had accounts from the Southern fleet yesterday, which state that the catch will be comparatively small. The bay fishermen will probably do an average business. Our Labrador fleet comprises twelve vessels, all of which have sailed. Last year we had sixteen vessels in this quarter."

Rescued from Drowning.

About one o'clock on Sunday morning, a man named Fourmette, about fifty years of age, fell in the dock at the foot of Canal-street. He was rescued from drowning through the exertions of a young man named Theodore Arnoux.

☞ Yesterday the Lecture Room recently erected near the corner of Fourteenth-street, Seventh-avenue, by the congregation of the First Wesleyan Church of the Methodist Episcopal Church, formerly of Varick-street, was consecrated to Divine Worship by the Pastor, Rev. Allen Steele. The plot of ground upon which this building is erected, and on which a brown-stone front edifice with two stores is to be commenced forthwith, is 112 feet 6 inches by 100 feet deep, and was purchased at a cost of $30,000. The congregation design to worship in the Lecture Room until the Church edifice is completed. It is two stories high, thirty feet by sixty, well fitted up, and cost $8,500.

☞ Judge Daly has not yet made up his mind on the Mackerelle case, and the Supervisors have not yet decided whether to raise the salary of the Judges. These two questions seem doomed to walk hand-in-hand some way into the future yet.

☞ A large number of relatives, friends, members of the Odd-Fellow Associations and United Americans attended, to Greenwood, the remains of Mr. Edward A. Schenkenhorn, aged 40 years, from his late residence, No. 211 Seventh-avenue.

☞ Rev. Dr. Dewitt preached in his church Lafayette-place, last evening, a sermon on the occasion of the death of the late Rev. Dr. John Scudder, the Missionary to Madras.

☞ The funeral of James O. Dwyer, aged 39 years, was attended yesterday, from his residence, No. 3 Lawrence-street, by a large body of friends and the 69th Regiment N. Y. State Militia.

☞ The Sunday law was not at all observed yesterday. Riot, rowdyism and rum were prevalent all over the City. Where is Mayor Wood?

☞ The City Anti Slavery Society met at its rooms on Saturday, elected officers, and talked over business for the year to come.

☞ Commodore Edgar's yacht, the Red Wing, was launched on Saturday. She is about 105 tons burden—built by George Steers.

☞ Sir Charles Grey sailed for Havre yesterday in the steamship Ericsson.

☞ Hon. Washington King, Mayor of St. Louis, having been questioned in regard to his nativity, writes that he was born the 5th of October, 1818, on the corner of Elm and Duane-streets, in the City of New-York.

A Word to Persons in Delicate Health.—Many delicate constitutions suffer from the laying aside of flannels on the approach of Summer, and many are injured by retaining them during the hot season. The difficulty is both pleasantly and effectually obviated by substituting composed of a very light, soft, elastic, and finely-wrought material. They act to a charm upon the system, gently absorbing the perspiration when it is too profuse, and provoking its genial flow whenever checked by any sudden change in temperature.

Ray's Zephyr Merino Under Garments,

Dr. Valentine Mott's

commendation is, "They are admirably adapted for invalids, to prevent them, during the hot season, from feeling the sudden changes of our variable climate."

LONG ISLAND.

Fire in Brooklyn.

At an early hour on Saturday last a fire broke out in the two-story frame dwelling, No. 246 Pacific-street, owned by Mr. Arthur Miller, and occupied by several families, and before the flames were subdued, buildings adjoining on either side, numbered 244, owned by Matthias Woon, and 248, owned by Francis Richards, were considerably damaged by fire and water. A number of families occupied each building. These lost most of the furniture, or saved it in a damaged state, upon which there is no insurance.

Mr. Miller's loss is estimated at $800, Mr. Woon's $1,000. Mr. Richards' $200; all covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

There were two fires during Friday night, but both were extinguished by the Third District Police, without calling out the Fire Department.

Mortality in Brooklyn.

Fifty-five deaths are reported to the Health Office of Brooklyn, as having occurred during the week ending the 16th inst., from the following

Diseases—Apoplexy, cancer, croup, debility, dysentery, typhoid fever, heart disease, whooping cough, hemorrhage of the lungs, inflammation of the liver, malformation, premature birth, rheumatism, still-born, one each; cholera infantum, congestion of the lungs, inflammation of the bowels, old age, two each; congestion of the brain, convulsions, dropsy in the head, scarlet fever, three each; measles, 5; inflammation of the lungs, 7; consumption, 6. Males, 32; females, 23; adults, 23; minors, 32. Total 55.

☞ Many friends and fellow members of St. David's Society, attended yesterday the funeral of Humphrey Lloyd Williams, Attorney-at-law, and a native of North Wales, at his late residence in Brooklyn.

☞ The receipts of the Firemen's Ball, recently held in the Eastern District of Brooklyn, for the benefit of the Fire Department Fund, exceeded one thousand dollars.

☞ Assistant-Captain Stierle, of the Third District Police, Brooklyn, has been held to answer a charge of assault and battery, alleged to have been committed upon the person of Mrs. M. E. Watson.

☞ The Bishop of Portland preached in the church of St. Charles Borromeo, (Brooklyn,) yesterday.

Military Visitors.

The National Blues, of New-Haven, visited Brooklyn on Friday, as the guests of the National Guard, Captain Sprague, who received them at the Montague Ferry, and after escorting them through some of the principal streets of the city, dined at Gothic Hall.

Williamsburg Dispensary.

NEW-JERSEY.

City Missionary's Report.

Rev. Mr. Verreniere, Jersey City missionary, in his monthly report, presented at the last meeting of the Board of Managers for the City Missionary and Tract Society, stated that, during the month, 3,011 tracts had been distributed, and 3,038 families visited by the visitors of the Society. The missionary holds services once on the Sabbath at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, and once at the Almshouse.

Corporation Attorney.

At the meeting of the Board of Councilmen of Hoboken, on Friday evening, S. W. Carey was appointed Corporation Attorney.

Visits to Hoboken.

Yesterday there was a larger number of visitors to Hoboken than on any previous Sunday this year. The liquor-places were open, and the demands for liquor and lager bier were fully supplied. Everything passed off peaceably.

MARRIED.

At Bethel, Conn., in St. Thomas' Church, on Thursday, June 14, by Rev. George F. Seymour, Rev. James Ogden Clark, of Tivoli, Dutchess County, N. Y., to Miss Frances E. Terry, of Bethel, Conn.

MONDAY, June 18, A. M.

The stock market, on Saturday, experienced some slight changes. The transactions in the leading securities at both meetings of the Stock Board were to a fair extent, but there was a little irregularity in prices. Railway shares were pretty active. New-York Central shares opened at 97 b60, and closed at 97½; Erie dropped to 48¾ s3, at the early meeting, but subsequently recovered a little and reached 49½, at the afternoon Board; Reading were freely dealt in, but at a decline of nearly ¾ ⅌ cent. from Friday's prices; Harlem ruled rather quiet, but firm; Hudson River were in demand, without any very noticeable alteration in value; Michigan Central—favorably affected by the announcement of the semi-annual cash dividend of 4 ⅌ cent., mentioned in our last paper—touched par, at the first meeting of the Board, and were afterwards held for a still higher price; Galena and Chicago closed at an advance of ½ ⅌ cent. on Friday's figures; Cleveland and Pittsburg ran up to 80, but were inactive at the rise; Cleveland and Toledo—more freely offered—opened at 92 and closed at 87½. A small lot of Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati changed hands at 110½—¾ more than on Friday. The prosperity of most of the Western Roads is continuous, and their stock is still on the advance. Railroad Bonds attracted considerable attention. Illinois Central Bonds were the brightest, but these varied but little in price. The Freeland Bonds of this Company were also active, but a shade lower. Hudson River Convertibles sold moderately, opening at 73 and closing at 72½ b30; do. third mortgage realized 75 ⅌ cent. more than on Friday. A small business was transacted in Erie Second Mortgage Bonds at 90½; Erie Bonds of 1875, at 90, b3; and Cleveland and Toledo Dividend Bonds, at 83, s2. The movements in State Stocks were not very large. Missouri Sixes were the most in demand, and closed at ¼ ⅌ cent. higher than the previous day. Tennessee Sixes of 1890 reached 86½, s3; 10,000 worth of Indiana Fives brought 95, and 7,000 California Sevens of 1870, 91. Light Fancy Securities, evinced no remarkable animation. Cumberland Coal Stock found pretty free buyers, but closed nearly ½ ⅌ cent. lower than on Friday. Canton Company ruled quiet, yet firm. Nicaragua Transit was dull and heavy. On the whole, however, the activity and buoyancy which had characterized the Stock Market throughout the five days preceding, were, with some trivial modifications, quite discernible in the Stock transactions the last day of the week. In Money matters nothing particularly novel transpired. An ample supply, and a slack, though slightly increased inquiry, preserved the low range of loan and discount rates, quoted in our last paper, unaltered. In Foreign Exchanges the business was very limited, and rates were but feebly sustained. We have heard of only some unimportant preparations for the steamer, to leave Boston next Wednesday, for Liverpool. It is thought that the Specie Export by this packet will not be nearly so large as that direct from New-York on last Wednesday, per Pacific. Much, if not most, of what the Boston steamer will carry out, will go forward to meet bills previously issued.

The general markets varied a little during the week. Cotton was much less sought after, and closed at prices essentially the same as those current the previous Saturday. The changes in Flour were more important. With an increased supply and a restricted inquiry, prices fell about 50c. ⅌ bbl. on low to good State brands; 31½c.@37½c. on mixed to fancy Western; 25c.@50c. on the choicer kinds of State and Western; and 25c.@37½c. on Canadian and Southern. Rye Flour was 25c. ⅌ bbl. cheaper, and dull. Corn Meal unaltered. Wheat, though not abundant, was in very slack request, and quoted about 10c. ⅌ bush. lower. Millers were the only buyers. Corn declined 3c.@5c. ⅌ bush., closing with less offering and a good demand therefor. In Provisions, more activity and decidedly greater firmness and buoyancy were apparent. Pork rose, in most cases, 50c.@62½c. ⅌ bbl., while Beef and Lard were firmer and a trifle dearer. No very important alterations occurred in other branches of trade. Speculators were wholly passive. The following is a comparative statement of the Exports of the principal articles of produce for the past and the corresponding week of last year:

Beef, bbls. & tcs....	358	4,916	408	8,862
Total Produce.....		$511,600		$271,052
Miscellaneous.....		543,590		783,707
Total for the week.....		$1,054,846		$1,034,759

The past week's import of Foreign Merchandise, including the Dry Goods table given in our last paper, equaled $1,505,150 against $2,833,029, same week last year,—indicating a large falling-off in the import for the week just closed,—the decrease being mainly in Dry Goods. For the current Treasury year, beginning 1st July last, the total entries of Foreign Merchandise, exclusive of Specie, amount to $143,550,000 against $174,902,000, to corresponding date the previous Treasury year. These figures exhibit a heavy decline in the value of this year's imports. The export of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous goods for the week, reached $1,094,759 against $1,054,846, the same week last year. For the Treasury year, to the present date, the exports, exclusive of Specie, add up $56,381,000 against $68,383,000, to corresponding date the previous Treasury year. The exports of Specie hence, during the week, as entered at the New-York Custom-House, equal $1,807,098,—of which the Collins steamer of Wednesday, for Liverpool, took over $1,675,000, and the Washington,—which left to-day for Southampton and Bremen,—$125,518. This Specie export for the week is heavier than that for the corresponding week last year, which, on reference to our paper for 19th of last June, we find to have been but $1,440,000. By our weekly tables, the exports of Specie from the port of New-York for the current Treasury year, amounts to $35,706,000 against $32,346,000, to same date the previous Treasury year. We have had no receipts of Treasure from California the past week, and as the outward movement therein from this port during the same period has been tolerably large, it is presumed that the Bank statements, to be made up to-day, will show a slight decrease in the specie reserve. Yet it is not feared that any very serious loss will appear in this regard. Coin continues to arrive pretty freely from the interior, and the heavier portion of the supply obtained thus finds its way, as we are informed, into the vaults of the Banks. Acquisitions of this nature, it is thought, will go far to cover any deficiency that may have resulted from the past week's large Specie export, hence. We are likely to have one or two arrivals the current week from the Isthmus, with a fortnight's later news from the Pacific side, and a pretty liberal treasure freight. The United States Assistant Treasurer in New-York held on Saturday, in all the departments under his charge, $5,830,450, against $6,256,921, at the close of the previous week. The regular Sub-Treasury balance was $2,361,299,—Saturday's receipts having been $50,440, and payments $34,353. Thus it appears Saturday's Sub-Treasury balance was a trifle in excess of that at the close of the previous week, which amounted to but $2,353,251. Preparations are now making at the Sub-Treasury to pay the Semi-annual interest on U. S. Stocks due on the 1st July, at about which date over one million of dollars will be thrown into the street.

The affairs of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company continue to be elaborately discussed in the leading columns of all our St. Louis exchanges. Far more words are used, than facts presented, in the controversy. We have already quoted, in our own paper, whatever we deemed essential to a proper understanding of the whole matter in dispute. In a lengthy editorial article in the St. Louis Republican of the 14th instant, a little more light is thrown upon the nature of the transaction which occasioned the discussion. We cannot republish all this article, but give the material points thereof underneath. It is needless for us, at present, to say anything more, in reference to this subject.

The Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad Company have just declared a half year's dividend of 5 ⅌ cent., payable on the 2d of July, at the office of Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co.

At a recent election, the following gentlemen were chosen Directors of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company: Abraham B. Baylis, Francis B. Cutting, Nelson Robinson, Thos. Tillston, Seth Grosvenor, Henry Coit, A. S. Murray, Moses Tucker and David Kent.

Mr. Draper advertises a sale on the 21st June of $600,000 Bonds of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, being the remainder of the issue of $1,500,000 by that Company for the extension of their Road from the Lackawanna coal region towards New-York. The Bonds are redeemable in 1875, and bear interest from 1st February last, at 7 ⅌ cent. ⅌ annum, payable half-yearly. We learn that the sale is to be made without reservation.

Mr. Albert H. Nicolay's regular semi-weekly auction sale of Stocks and Bonds will take place on Monday next, at 12½ o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange.

Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

Abridged from the St. Louis Republican, July 14.

The discussion of the affairs of this Company, which was at first confined to the columns of this paper, has spread to almost every journal in the city, and only two of them—one in each—have undertaken to defend the acts of the minority of the Board of Directors, last week, in executing a chattel note to Page & Bacon for the inconsiderable sum of $1,158,484 61, in default of payment of which Mr. J. H. Alexander, as Trustee, was authorized to enter upon and take possession of the road and all its income, and, after twenty days' notice, to sell the same at public sale. The Democrat, the Mirror, the Herald, the Anzeiger, all deprecate and denounce the transaction as a fraud upon the city and county of St. Louis and the individual stockholders, and invariably in men placed in that position to protect the interest and the rights of the stockholders. Nor is the feeling of indignation less strong in the country, as they examine and reflect upon the various developments which have been made in connection with the construction of this road; and we doubt whether it will be allayed until a full and explicit history of the road, and of every item of the vast expenditures which are alleged to have been made upon it, has been given to the public.

In one thing we find we have been mistaken. We were led to believe, that the instruments under which the first and second Bonds were sold, were deeds of mortgage, and requiring to be foreclosed by decrees of the Courts of Illinois. This is not the case, as appears from a copy of the first mortgage bond published in the Intelligencer of yesterday. This instrument creates Marshall O. Roberts, John G. Phelps, and Henry A. Coit, of New-York, Trustees; and vests the issuance of eight hundred and fifty bonds for the sum of $1,000 each by the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company, with interest at the rate of 7 ⅌ cent. per annum.

Under this deed of trust, the Trustees upon failure of the payment of interest or principal of the said $800,000, if demanded by the parties holding the bonds or coupons, are required to take possession of the road and its appurtenances, and to conduct the business thereof in a full and efficient manner; and, in a certain contingency, to sell the road, first giving, however, three months' notice of the time, terms and place of sale, which is to take place in St. Louis. Upon a failure, therefore, of the payment of the July interest on the first and second mortgage bonds, the Trustees may take possession of the road, and sell it, but not until they have given three months' notice—a much longer time than that allowed in the deed for Page & Bacon's interest, and which is free of twenty days.

Above the justice and propriety of the course of the four Directors who, in this way, closed out the interest of the City and County of St. Louis and of individual Stockholders, on the 5th of June, there may be a little, but it is a very trifling difference of opinion in this community. No man is so poor as not to have some friends, and it is natural that persons exercising such a pecuniary influence as Page & Bacon have done, should find individuals to sustain the transaction under consideration. But even this number is restricted. Threats are, we notice, thrown out to discourage gentlemen in official stations from doing their duty, but we apprehend that they know what they are about, and have as good legal advisers as the party who proposes to swamp so much of the money of the people of this country.

The road may be sold, but whenever the advertisement appears, law will, we doubt not, be invoked, both by the city and county, to prevent it. If unsuccessful, the persons to whom this care belongs will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have performed their duty. Under the circumstances of mystery in which the affairs of the company have been involved—when the claims of the party for whose benefit this deed of trust was given, has been run up hundreds of thousands of dollars in a brief month—if they had done less, they would have been recreant to the people who have reposed confidence in them.

Let it be remembered, that the city and county are to lose $700,000 by the measures taken to enforce the sale of this road—that even when this is done, and they are dispossessed of all control over it—it will be a draft upon them for eighteen years, and there is enough to provoke harsher denunciations than any that have yet been made. For eighteen years the Treasury of the city and that of the county will have to pour out forty-two thousand dollars per annum, to pay interest on the debt which was created to help along this road. It is no trifling matter to be called on to pay $700,000, interest money alone, under such circumstances, and people will talk of, and write about it, however unpleasant it may be to those who have produced by the speculation.

Anthracite Coal Trade.

From the Philadelphia Ledger, June 16.

The anthracite coal tonnage is light this week from all the several lines. The shipments on the Lehigh for the week ending on Saturday last reached only 20,268 tons. The Reading Railroad brought down, for the week ending on Thursday, 42,111 tons, against 261,356 tons to the same time last year.

The shipments on the Schuylkill Navigation, for the week ending with Thursday last, were 27,433 tons, making, for the last season, 391,700 tons to the corresponding time last season. There must have been some obstacle to free working on the Lehigh or on the Delaware division, though we have not heard what. The shipments from the Schuylkill region are light, though they indicate that the difficulty last week of working, from the flooded condition of the mines, has been overcome.
